PUBLISHER'S NOTE

The reception accorded to the pocket edition of Dean Plumptre's "Dante" has encouraged the publishers to issue in the same format the Dean's masterly translation of the Tragedies of Æschylos.

In preparing the present issue they have followed the carefully revised text of the second edition, and have included the scholarly and suggestive annotations with which the Dean invariably delighted to enrich his work as a translator.

The seven Plays, which are all that remain of the seventy or eighty with which Æschylos is credited, are presented in their chronological order. Passages in which the reading or the rendering is more or less conjectural, and in which, accordingly, the aid of the commentator is advisable, are marked by an asterisk; and passages which are regarded as spurious by editors of authority have been placed in brackets.

In translating the Choral Odes the Dean used such unrhymed metres—observing the strophic and antistrophic arrangement—as seemed to him most analogous in their general rhythmical effect to those of the original. He added in an appendix, however, for the sake of those who preferred the rhymed form with which they were familiar, a rhymed version of the chief Odes of the Oresteian trilogy. Those in the other dramas did not appear to him to be of equal interest, or to lend themselves with equal facility to a like attempt. The Greek text on which the translation is based is, for the most part, that of Mr. Paley's edition of 1861.

A translation was also given of the Fragments which have survived the wreck of the lost plays, so that the work contains all that has been left to us associated with the name of Æschylos.

In the present edition a chronological outline has been substituted for the biographical sketch of the poet, who from his daring enlargement of the scope of the drama, the magnificence of his spectacular effects and the splendour of his genius, was rightly honoured as “the Father of Tragedy.”

CHRONOLOGICAL OUTLINE OF THE LIFE OF ÆSCHYLOS

B.C.

527 Peisistratos died.

525 Birth at Eleusis, in Attica, of Æschylos, son of Euphorion.

510 Expulsion of the Peisistratidæ. * Democratic constitution of Cleisthenes.

Approximate date of incident in the legend that Æschylos was set to watch grapes as they were ripening for the vintage, and fell asleep; and lo! as he slept Dionysos appeared to him and bade him give himself to write tragedies for the great festival of the god. And when he awoke, he found himself invested with new powers of thought and utterance, and the work was as easy to him as if he had been trained to it for many years (Pausan, Att. i. 21, § 3).^o 500 Birth of Anaxagoras.

499 Æschylos exhibited his first tragedy, in unsuccessful competition with Pratinas and Chcerilos.

* Cf., the legend of Caedmon, "the Father of English Song."

CHRONOLOGICAL OUTLINE

B.C.

* The wooden scaffolding broke beneath the crowd of spectators, and the accident led the Athenians to build their first stone theatre for the Dionysiac festivals.

Partly out of annoyance at his defeat, it is said, and partly in a spirit of adventure, Æschylos sailed for Sicily.

497 Death of Pythagoras(?).

495 Birth of Sophocles at Colonos.

491 Æschylos at Athens.

490 The Battle of Marathon. Æschylos and his brothers, Kynægeiros and Ameinias, so distinguished themselves, that the Athenians ordered their heroic deeds to be commemorated in a picture.

Death of Theognis(?).

488 Prize awarded to Simonides for an elegy on Marathon. Æschylos, piqued, it is said, at his failure in the competition, again departed to Sicily.

485 Xerxes succeeded Dareios.

484 Æschylos won, in a dramatic contest with Pratinas, Choerilos, and Phrynichos, the first of a series of thirteen successes.

Birth of Herodotos.

480 Athens burnt by Xerxes.

Æschylos fought at Artemisium and Salamis. At Salamis his brother Ameinias lost his hand, and was awarded the prize of valour.

Sophocles led the Chorus of Victory.

Birth of Euripides.

CHRONOLOGICAL OUTLINE

B.C.

479 Æschylos at the Battle of Plataea.

477 Commencement of Athenian supremacy.

472 Æschylos carried off the first prize with The Persians (the first of the extant plays), which belonged to a tetralogy that included two tragedies, Phineus and Glaucos, and a satyric drama, Prometheus the Fire stealer.

The Persians has the interest of being a contemporary record of the great sea-fight at Salamis by an eye-witness.

471 Æschylos appears to have produced this year his next tetralogy, of which The Seven against Thebes survives.

The play was directed against the policy of aiming at the supremacy of Athens by attacking other Greek States, and, in brief, maintained the policy of Aristides as against that of Themistocles.

Birth of Thucydides.

468 Sophocles gained his first victory in tragedy with his Triptolemos; Æschylos defeated.

Æschylos charged with impiety, on the ground that he had profaned the Mysteries by introducing on the stage rites known only to the initiated; tried and acquitted: departure for Syracuse.

467 Æschylos at the court of Hieron at Syracuse, where he is said to have composed dramas on local legends, such as The Women of Ætna.

Death of Simonides.

461 Ostracism of Kimon; ascendancy of Pericles.

CHRONOLOGICAL OUTLINE

^{B.C.}
460-59 Probable date of The Suppliants, if the play be connected with the alliance between Argos and Athens (B.C. 461), and the war with the Persian forces in Egypt, upon which the Athenians had entered as allies of the Libyan Prince Inaros. (B.C. 460.)

The date of Prometheus Bound has been referred to B.C. 470 on the strength of a description of Ætna (vv. 370-380), which is supposed to be a reference to the eruption of B.C. 477. Internal evidence, however, seems to warrant the view that The Suppliants and the Prometheus Bound were separated by only a brief interval of time.

458 Æschylos in Athens. He found new men and new methods; institutions, held most sacred as the safeguard of Athenian religion, were being criticised and attacked; the Court of Areiopagos was threatened with abolition under pretence of reform.

Production of the Oresteian Trilogy (or, rather, tetralogy, as in addition to the Agamemnon, the Libation-pourers, and the Eumenides, there was a satyric drama, Proteus).

This trilogy was a conservative protest, religious, social, and political, which culminated in the assertion of the divine authority of the Areiopagos.

Popular feeling was once more excited against the poet, who left Athens never to return, and settled at Gela, in Sicily, under the patronage of Hieron.

456 Death of Æschylos, aged 69.

An oracle foretold that he was to die by a blow from heaven, and according to the legend, an eagle, mistaking the poet's head for a stone as he sat writing, dropped a tortoise on it to break the shell.

He was buried at Gela, and his epitaph, ascribed to himself, ran: "Beneath this stone lies Æschylos, son of Euphorion. At fertile Gela he died. Marathon can tell of his tested manhood, and the Persians who there felt his mettle."

He is said to have produced between seventy and eighty plays, of which only seven survive.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

ATOSSA	Ghost of DAREIOS
Messenger	XERXES
Chorus of Persian Elders

ARGUMENT.—When Xerxes came to the throne of Persia, remembering how his father Dareios had sought to subdue the land of the Hellenes, and seeking to avenge the defeat of Datis and Artaphernes on the field of Marathon, he gathered together a mighty host of all nations under his dominion, and led them against Hellas. And at first he prospered and prevailed, crossed the Hellespont, and defeated the Spartans at Thermopylæ, and took the city of Athens, from which the greater part of its citizens had fled. But at last he and his armament met with utter overthrow at Salamis. Meanwhile Atossa, the mother of Xerxes, with her handmaids and the elders of the Persians, waited anxiously at Susa, where was the palace of the great king, for tidings of her son.

Note.—Within two years after the battle of Salamis, the feeling of natural exultation was met by Phrynichos in a tragedy bearing the title of The Phænikians, and having for its subject the defeat of Xerxes. As he had come under the displeasure of the Athenian demos for having brought on the stage the sufferings of their Ionian kinsmen in his Capture of Miletos, he was apparently anxious to regain his popularity by a "sensation" drama of another kind; and his success seems to have prompted Æschylos to a like attempt five years later, B.C. 473. The Tetralogy to which the play belonged, and which gained the first prize on its representation, included the two tragedies (unconnected in subject) of Phineus and Glaucus, and the satyric drama of Prometheus the Firestealer.

The play has, therefore, the interest of being strictly a contemporary narrative of the battle of Salamis and its immediate consequences, by one who may himself have been present at it, and whose brother Ameinias (Herod. viii 93) distinguished himself in it by a special act of heroism. As such, making all allowance for the influence of dramatic exigencies, and the tendency to colour history so as to meet the tastes of patriotic Athenians, it may claim, where it differs from the story told by Herodotos, to be a more trustworthy record. And it has, we must remember, the interest of being the only extant drama of its class, the only tragedy the subject of which is not taken from the cycle of heroic myths, but from the national history of the time. Far below the Oresteian Trilogy as it may seem to us as a work of art, having more the character of a spectacle than a poem, it was, we may well believe, unusually successful at the time, and it is said to have been chosen by Hiero for reproduction at Syracuse after Æschylos had settled there under his patronage.

Enter Chorus of Persian Elders.

We the title bear of Faithful,¹
Friends of Persians gone to Hellas,
Watchers left of treasure city,²
Gold-abounding, whom, as oldest,
Xerxes hath himself appointed,
He, the offspring of Darcios,
As the warders of his country.
And about our king's returning,
And our army's, gold-abounding,
Over-much, and boding evil,
Does my mind within me shudder
(For our whole force, Asia's offspring,
Now is gone), and for our young chief
Sorely frets : nor courier cometh,
Nor any horseman, bringing tidings
To the city of the Persians.
From Ecbatana departing,

¹ "The Faithful," or "trusty," seems to have been a special title of honour given to the veteran councillors of the king (Xenoph. Anab. i. 15), just as that of the "Immortals" was chosen for his body-guard (Herod. vii 83).

² Susa was pre-eminently the treasury of the Persian kings (Herod. v. 49 ; Strabo, xv. p. 731), their favourite residence in spring, as Ecbatana in Media was in summer and Babylon in winter.

THE PERSIANS

Susa, or the Kissian fortress,¹
Forth they sped upon their journey,
Some in ships, and some on horses,
Some on foot, still onward marching,
In their close array presenting Squadrons duly armed for battle : 20
Then Armistres, Artaphernes,
Megabazes, and Astaspes,
Mighty leaders of the Persians,
Kings, and of the great King servants,¹
March, the chiefs of mighty army.
Archers they and mounted horsemen.
Dread to look on, fierce in battle,
Artembares proud, on horseback,
And Masistres, and Imæos, 30
Archer famed, and Pharandakes,
And the charioteer Sosthanes.
Neilos mighty and prolific
Sent forth others, Susikanes,
Pegastagon, Egypt's offspring,
And the chief of sacred Memphis ;
Great Arsames, Ariomardos,
Ruler of primeval Thebæ,
And the marshmen,² and the rowers,

¹ Kissia was properly the name of the district in which Susa stood ; but here, and in v. 123, it is treated as if it belonged to a separate city. Throughout the play there is, indeed, a lavish use of Persian barbaric names of persons and places, without a very minute regard to historical accuracy.

² Here, as in Herodotos and Greek writers generally, the title, "the King," or "the great King," was enough. It could be understood only of the Persian. The latter name had been borne by the kings of Assyria (2 Kings xviii. 28). A little later it passed into the fuller, more boastful form of "The King of kings."

³ The inhabitants of the Delta of the Nile, especially those of

THE PERSIANS

Dread, and in their number countless. 40
 And there follow crowds of Lydians,
 Very delicate and stately,¹
 Who the people of the mainland
 Rule throughout—whom Mitragathes
 And brave Arkteus, kingly chieftains,
 Led, from Sardis, gold-abounding,
 Riding on their many chariots,
 Three or four a-breast their horses,
 Sight to look upon all dreadful.
 And the men of sacred Tmôlos²
 Rush to place the yoke of bondage
 On the neck of conquered Hellas. 50
 Mardon, Tharabis, spear-anvils,³
 And the Mysians, javelin-darting ;⁴
 Babylôn too, gold-abounding,
 Sends a mingled cloud, swept onward,

the marshy districts near the Heracleotic mouth, were famed as supplying the best and bravest soldiers of any part of Egypt.—Comp. Thucyd. i. 110.

¹ The epithet was applied probably by Æschylos to the Lydians properly so called, the barbaric race with whom the Hellenes had little or nothing in common. They, in dress, diet, mode of life, their distaste for the contests of the arena, seemed to the Greeks the very type of effeminacy. The Ionian Greeks, however, were brought under the same influence, and gradually acquired the same character. The suppression of the name of the Ionians in the list of the Persian forces may be noticed as characteristic. The Athenian poet would not bring before an Athenian audience the shame of their Asiatic kinsmen.

² Tmôlos, sacred as being the mythical birth-place of Dionysos.

³ "Spear-anvils," sc., meeting the spear of their foes as the anvils would meet it, turning its point, themselves steadfast and immovable.

⁴ So Herodotos (vii. 74) in his account of the army of Xerxes describes the Mysians as using for their weapons those darts or "javelins" made by hardening the ends in the fire.

THE PERSIANS

Both the troops who man the vessels,
And the skilled and trustful bowmen ;
And the race the sword that beareth,
Follows from each clime of Asia,
At the great King's dread commandment.
These, the bloom of Persia's greatness,
Now are gone forth to the battle ;
And for these, their mother country,
Asia, mourns with mighty yearning ;
Wives and mothers faint with trembling
Through the hours that slowly linger,
Counting each day as it passes.

STROPHE I

The king's great host, destroying cities mighty,
Hath to the land beyond the sea passed over,
Crossing the straits of Athamantid Helle,¹
On raft by ropes secured,
And thrown his path, compact of many a vessel,
As yoke upon the neck of mighty ocean.

ANTISTROPHE I

Of populous Asia thus the mighty ruler
'Gainst all the land his God-sent host directeth
In two divisions, both by land and water,
Trusting the chieftains stern,
The men who drive the host to fight, relentless—
He, sprung from gold-born race, a hero god-like.²

¹ Helle the daughter of Athamas, from whom the Hellespont took its name. For the description of the pontoons formed by boats, which were moored together with cables and finally covered with faggots, comp. Herod. vii. 36.

² "Gold-born," sc., descended from Perseus, the child of Danaë.

THE PERSIANS

STROPHE II

Glancing with darkling look, and eyes as of ravening dragon,
With many a hand, and many a ship, and Syrian chariot driving,¹
He upon spearmen renowned brings battle of conquering arrows.²

ANTISTROPHE II

Yea, there is none so tried as, withstanding the flood of the mighty,⁹⁹
To keep within steadfast bounds that wave of ocean resistless ;
Hard to fight is the host of the Persians, the people
stout-hearted.

MESODE

Yet ah ! what mortal can ward the craft of the God all-deceiving ?
*Who, with a nimble foot, of one leap is easily sovereign ?
For Atè, fawning and kind, at first a mortal betraying,¹⁰⁰
Then in snares and meshes decoys him,
Whence one who is but man in vain doth struggle to
'scape from.

¹ Syrian, either in the vague sense in which it became almost synonymous with Assyrian, or else showing that Syria, properly so called, retained the fame for chariots which it had had at a period as early as the time of the Hebrew Judges (Judg. v. 3). Herodotos (vii. 140) gives an Oracle of Delphi in which the same epithet appears.

² The description, though put into the mouth of Persians, is meant to flatter Hellenic pride. The Persians and their army were for the most part light-armed troops only, barbarians equipped with javelins or bows. In the sculptures of Persepolis, as in those of Nineveh and Khorsabad, this mode of warfare is throughout the most conspicuous. They, the Hellenes, were the hoplites, warriors of the spear and the shield, the cuirass and the greaves.

THE PERSIANS

STROPHE III

For Fate of old, by the high Gods' decree,
Prevailed, and on the Persians laid this task,
 Wars with the crash of towers,
And set the surge of horsemen in' array,
And the fierce sack that lays a city low. 110

ANTISTROPHE III

But now they learnt to look on ocean plains,¹
The wide sea hoary with the violent blast,
 Waxing o'er confident
In cables formed of many a slender strand,
And rare device of transport for the host.

STROPHE IV

So now my soul is torn,
As clad in mourning, in its sore affright,
Ah me ! ah me ! for all the Persian host ! 120
 Lest soon our country learn
That Susa's mighty fort is void of men.

ANTISTROPHE IV

And through the Kissians' town
Shall echo heavy thud of hands on breast.
Woe ! woe ! when all the crowd of women speak
 This utterance of great grief,
And byssine robes are rent in agony.

STROPHE V

For all the horses strong,
And host that march on foot,

¹ A touch of Athenian exultation in their life as seamen. To them the sea was almost a home. They were familiar with it from childhood. To the Persians it was new and untried. They had a new lesson to learn, late in the history of the nation, late in the lives of individual soldiers.

THE PERSIANS

Like swarm of bees, have gone with him who led 130
The vanguard of the host.
Crossing the sea-washed, bridge-built promontory
That joins the shores of either continent.¹

ANTISTROPHE V

And beds with tears are wet
In grief for husbands gone,
And Persian wives are delicate in grief,
Each yearning for her lord ;
And each who sent her warrior-spouse to battle 140
Now mourns at home in dreary solitude.
But come, ye Persians now,
And sitting in this ancient hall of ours,
Let us take thought deep-counselling and wise,
(Sore need is there of that,)
How fareth now the great king Xerxes, he Who calls Dareios sire,
Bearing the name our father bore of old ?
Is it the archers' bow that wins the day ?
Or does the strength prevail 150
Of iron point that heads the spear's strong shaft ?
But lo ! in glory like the face of gods,
The mother of my king, my queen, appears :
Let us do reverent homage at her feet ;
Yea, it is meet that all
Should speak to her with words of greeting kind.

Mother of Xerxes, reverend in thine age,

THE PERSIANS

Wife of Dareios ! hail !

'Twas thine to join in wedlock with a spouse

Whom Persians owned as God,¹

And of a God thou art the mother too,

Unless its ancient Fortune fails our host.

Atoss. Yes, thus I come, our gold-decked palace leaving,

The bridal bower Dareios with me slept in.

Care gnaws my heart, but now I tell you plainly

A tale, my friends, which may not leave me fearless,

Lest boastful wealth should stumble at the threshold,

And with his foot o'erturn the prosperous fortune

That great Dareios raised with Heaven's high blessing.

And twofold care untold my bosom haunteth :

We may not honour wealth that has no warriors,

Nor on the poor shines light to strength proportioned ;

Wealth without stint we have, yet for our eye we tremble ;

170

For as the eye of home I deem a master's presence.

Wherefore, ye Persians, aid me now in counsel ;

Trusty and old, in you lies hope of wisdom.

Chor. Queen of our land ! be sure thou need'st not utter

Or thing or word twice o'er, which power may point to ;

Thou bid'st us counsel give who fain would serve thee.

Atoss. Ever with many visions of the night²

¹ Stress is laid by the Hellenic poet, as in the Agamemnon (v. 895), and in v. 707 of this play, on the tendency of the East to give to its kings the names and the signs of homage which were due only to the Gods. The Hellenes might deify a dead hero, but not a living sovereign. On different grounds the Jews shrank, as in the stories of Nebuchadnezzar and Dareios (Dan. iii. 6), from all such acts.

² In the Greek, as in the translation, there is a change of metre, intended apparently to represent the transition from the tone of eager excitement to the ordinary level of discourse.

THE PERSIANS

Am I encompassed, since my son went forth,
Leading a mighty host, with aim to sack
The land of the Ionians. But ne'er yet 190
Have I beheld a dream so manifest
As in the night just past. And this I'll tell thee :
There stood by me two women in fair robes ;
And this in Persian garments was arrayed,
And that in Dorian came before mine eyes ;
In stature both of tallest, comeliest size ;
And both of faultless beauty, sisters twain
Of the same stock.¹ And they twain had their homes,
One in the Hellenic, one in alien land.
And these two, as I dreamt I saw, were set 190
At variance with each other. And my son
Learnt it, and checked and mollified their wrath,
And yokes them to his chariot, and his collar
He places on their necks. And one was proud
Of that equipment,² and in harness gave
Her mouth obedient ; but the other kicked,
And tears the chariot's trappings with her hands,
And rushes off uncurbed, and breaks its yoke
Asunder. And my son falls low, and then
His father comes, Dareios, pitying him.
And lo ! when Xerxes sees him, he his clothes 200
Rends round his limbs. These things I say I saw
In visions of the night ; and when I rose,

¹ With reference either to the mythos that Asia and Europa were both daughters of Okeanos, or to the historical fact that the Asiatic Ionians and the Dorians of Europe were both of the same Hellenic stock. The contrast between the long flowing robes of the Asiatic women, and the short, scanty kilt-like dress of those of Sparta must be borne in mind if we would see the picture in its completeness.

² Athenian pride is flattered with the thought that they had resisted while the Ionian Greeks had submitted all too willingly to the yoke of the Barbarian.

THE PERSIANS

And dipped my hands in fountain flowing clear,¹
I at the altar stood with hand that bore
Sweet incense, wishing holy chrism to pour
To the averting Gods whom thus men worship.
And I beheld an eagle in full flight
To Phœbos' altar-hearth ; and then, my friends, 210
I stood, struck dumb with fear ; and next I saw
A kite pursuing, in her wingèd course,
And with his claws tearing the eagle's head,
Which did nought else but crouch and yield itself.
Such terrors it has been my lot to see,
And yours to hear : For be ye sure, my son,
If he succeed, will wonder-worthy prove ;
But if he fail, still irresponsible
He to the people, and in either case,
He, should he but return, is sovereign still.²

Chor. We neither wish, O Lady, thee to frighten O'ermuch with what we say, nor yet encourage :
But thou, the Gods adoring with entreaties,
If thou hast seen aught ill, bid them avert it,
And that all good things may receive fulfilment
For thee, thy children, and thy friends and country. 220
And next 'tis meet libations due to offer
To Earth and to the dead. And ask thy husband,
Dareios, whom thou say'st by night thou sawest,
With kindly mood from 'neath the Earth to send thee
Good things to light for thee and for thine offspring,
While adverse things shall fade away in darkness.

¹ Lustrations of this kind, besides their general significance in cleansing from defilement, had a special force as charms to turn aside dangers threatened by foreboding dreams. Comp. Aristoph. Frogs, v. 1264; Persius, Sat. ii. 16.

² The political bearing of the passage as contrasting this characteristic of the despotism of Persia with the strict account to which all Athenian generals were subject, is, of course, unmistakable.

THE PERSIANS

Such things do I, a self-taught seer, advise thee
In kindly mood, and any way we reckon
That good will come to thee from out these omens.

Atoss. Well, with kind heart, hast thou, as first expounder,
Out of my dreams brought out a welcome meaning
For me, and for my sons; and thy good wishes,
May they receive fulfilment! And this also,
As thou dost bid, we to the Gods will offer 230
And to our friends below, when we go homeward.
But first, my friends, I wish to hear of Athens,
Where in the world do men report it standeth?¹

² The words point to the silver mines of Laureion, which had been worked under Peisistratos, and of which this is the first mention in Greek literature.

THE PERSIANS

How every way the Gods have wrought out ill,
Ah me ! ah me, our army all destroyed.

Mess. O name of Salamis that most I loathe !
Ah, how I groan, remembering Athens too !

ANTISTROPHE III

Chor. Yea, to her enemies
Athens may well be hateful, and our minds
Remember how full many a Persian wife 290
She, for no cause, made widows and bereaved.

Atoss. Long time I have been silent in my woe,
Crushed down with grief ; for this calamity
Exceeds all power to tell the woe, or ask.
Yet still we mortals needs must bear the griefs
The Gods send on us. Clearly tell thy tale,
Unfolding the whole mischief, even though
Thou groan'st at evils, who there is not dead,
And which of our chief captains we must mourn,
And who, being set in office o'er the host,
Left by their death their office desolate. 300

Mess. Xerxes still lives and sees the light of day.

Atoss. To my house, then, great light thy words have brought,

Bright dawn of morning after murky night.

Mess. Artembares, the lord of myriad horse,
On the hard flinty coasts of the Sileni
Is now being dashed ; and valiant Dadakes,
Captain of thousands, smitten with the spear,
Leapt wildly from his ship. And Tenagon,
Best of the true old Bactrians, haunts the soil
Of Aias' isle ; Lilaïos, Arsames, 310
And with them too Argestes, there defeated,
Hard by the island where the doves abound,¹

¹ Possibly Salamis itself, as famed for the doves which were reared there as sacred to Aphrodite, but possibly also one of the Beat here and there upon the rocky shore.

 [And from the springs of Neilos, Ægypt's stream,
 Arkteus, Adeues, Pheresseues too,
 These with Pharnuchos in one ship were lost ;]
 Matallos, Chrysa-born, the captain bold
 Of myriads, leader he of swarthy horse
 Some thrice ten thousand strong, has fallen low,
 His red beard, hanging all its shaggy length,
 Deep dyed with blood, and purpled all his skin.
 Arabian Magos, Bactrian Artames, 320
 They perished, settlers in a land full rough.
 [Amistris and Amphistreus, guiding well
 The spear of many a conflict, and the noble
 Ariomardos, leaving bitter grief
 For Sardis ; and the Mysian Seisames.]
 With twelve score ships and ten came Tharybis ;
 Lyrnæan he in birth, once fair in form,
 He lies, poor wretch, a death inglorious dying :
 And, first in valour proved, Syennesis,
 Kilikian satrap, who, for one man, gave
 Most trouble to his foes, and nobly died. 330
 Of leaders such as these I mention make,
 And out of many evils tell but few.

Atoss. Woe, woe ! I hear the very worst of ills,
 Shame to the Persians, cause of bitter wail ;
 But tell me, going o'er the ground again,
 How great the number of the Hellenes' navy,
 That they presumed with Persia's armament
 To wage their warfare in the clash of ships.

Mess. As far as numbers went, be sure the ships 340
 Of Persia had the better, for the Hellenes
 Had, as their total, ships but fifteen score, smaller islands in the Saronic gulf, which the epithet would be enough to designate for an Athenian audience. The "coasts of the Sileni" in v. 305 are identified by scholiasts with Salamis.

THE PERSIANS

And other ten selected as reserve.¹

And Xerxes (well I know it) had a thousand
Which he commanded—those that most excelled²
In speed were twice five score and seven in number ;
So stands the account. Deem'st thou our forces less
In that encounter ? Nay, some Power above
Destroyed our host, and pressed the balance down
With most unequal fortune, and the Gods
Preserve the city of the Goddess Pallas.

Atoss. Is the Athenians' city then unsacked ? 350

Mess. Their men are left, and that is bulwark strong.³

Atoss. Next tell me how the fight of ships began.
Who led the attack ? Were those Hellenes the first,
Or was't my son, exulting in his strength ?

Mess. The author of the mischief, O my mistress,
Was some foul fiend or Power on evil bent ;
For lo ! a Hellene from the Athenian host⁴
Came to thy son, to Xerxes, and spake thus,
That should the shadow of the dark night come,
The Hellenes would not wait him, but would leap 360
Into their rowers' benches, here and there,
And save their lives in secret, hasty flight.

¹ Perhaps— " And ten of these selected as reserve."

² As regards the number of the Persian ships, 1000 of average, and 207 of special swiftness. Æschylos agrees with Herodotos, who gives the total of 1207. The latter, however, reckons the Greek ships not at 310, but 378 (vii. 89, viii. 48).

⁴ As the story is told by Herodotos (vii. 75), this was Sikinnos, the slave of Themistocles, and the stratagem was the device of that commander to save the Greeks from the disgrace and ruin of a saute qui peut flight in all directions.

THE PERSIANS

And he forthwith, this hearing, knowing not
The Hellene's guile, nor yet the Gods' great wrath,
Gives this command to all his admirals,
Soon as the sun should cease to burn the earth
With his bright rays, and darkness thick invade
The firmament of heaven, to set their ships
In three-fold lines, to hinder all escape,
And guard the billowy straits, and others place 370
In circuit round about the isle of Aias :
For if the Hellenes 'scaped an evil doom,
And found a way of secret, hasty flight,
It was ordained that all should lose their heads.¹
Such things he spake from soul o'erwrought with pride,
For he knew not what fate the Gods would send ;
And they, not mutinous, but prompt to serve,
'Then made their supper ready, and each sailor
Fastened his oar around true-fitting thole ;
And when the sunlight vanished, and the night
Had come, then each man, master of an oar, 380
Went to his ship, and all men bearing arms,
And through the long ships rank cheered loud to rank ;
And so they sail, as 'twas appointed each,
And all night long the captains of the fleet
Kept their men working, rowing to and fro ;
Night then came on, and the Hellenic host
In no wise sought to take to secret flight.
And when day, bright to look on with white steeds,
O'erspread the earth, then rose from the Hellenes 390
Loud chant of cry of battle, and forthwith
Echo gave answer from each island rock ;
And terror then on all the Persians fell,
Of fond hopes disappointed. Not in flight

¹ The Greeks never beheaded their criminals, and the punishment is mentioned as being specially characteristic of the barbaric Persians.

THE PERSIANS

The Hellenes then their solemn pæans sang :
But with brave spirit hasting on to battle.
With martial sound the trumpet fired those ranks ;
And straight with sweep of oars that flew through foam,
They smote the loud waves at the boatswain's call ;
And swiftly all were manifest to sight. 400
Then first their right wing moved in order meet ;¹
Next the whole line its forward course began,
And all at once we heard a mighty shout,—
“ O sons of Hellenes, forward, free your country ;
Free too your wives, your children, and the shrines
Built to your fathers' Gods, and holy tombs
Your ancestors now rest in. Now the fight
Is for our all.” And on our side indeed
Arose in answer din of Persian speech,
And time to wait was over ; ship on ship 410
Dashed its bronze-pointed beak, and first a barque
Of Hellas did the encounter fierce begin,²
And from Phœnikian vessel crashes off
Her carved prow. And each against his neighbour
Steers his own ship : and first the mighty flood
Of Persian host held out. But when the ships
Were crowded in the straits,³ nor could they give Help to each other, they with mutual shocks,
With beaks of bronze went crushing each the other,
Shivering their rowers' benches. And the ships
Of Hellas, with manœuvring not unskilful,

Charged circling round them. And the hulls of ships ⁴²⁰
 Floated capsized, nor could the sea be seen,
 Strown, as it was, with wrecks and carcasses ;
 And all the shores and rocks were full of corpses.
 And every ship was wildly rowed in fight,
 All that composed the Persian armament.
 And they, as men spear tunnies,¹ or a haul
 Of other fishes, with the shafts of oars,
 Or spars of wrecks went smiting, cleaving down ;
 And bitter groans and wailings overspread
 The wide sea-waves, till eye of swarthy night ⁴³⁰
 Bade it all cease : and for the mass of ills,
 Not, though my tale should run for ten full days,
 Could I in full recount them. Be assured
 That never yet so great a multitude
 Died in a single day as died in this.

Atoss. Ah, me ! Great then the sea of ills that breaks
 On Persia and the whole barbaric host.

Mess. Be sure our evil fate is but half o'er :
 On this has supervened such bulk of woe,
 As more than twice to outweigh what I've told. ⁴⁴⁰

Atoss. And yet what fortune could be worse than this?
 Say, what is this disaster which thou tell'st,
 That turns the scale to greater evils still ?

Mess. Those Persians that were in the bloom of life,
 Bravest in heart and noblest in their blood,
 And by the king himself deemed worthiest trust,
 Basely and by most shameful death have died.

Atoss. Ah ! woe is me, my friends, for our ill fate !
 What was the death by which thou say'st they perished ?

¹ Tunny-fishing has always been prominent in the occupations on the Mediterranean coasts, and the sailors who formed so large a part of every Athenian audience would be familiar with the process here described, of striking or harpooning them. Aristophanes (Wasps, 1087) coins (or uses) the word "to tunny" (θυρράζειν) to express the act. Comp. Herod. i. 62.

THE PERSIANS

Mess. There is an isle that lies off Salamis,¹
Small, with bad anchorage for ships, where Pan, 450
Pan the dance-loving, haunts the sea-washed coast.
There Xerxes sends these men, that when their foes,
Being wrecked, should to the islands safely swim,
They might with ease destroy th' Hellenic host,
And save their friends from out the deep sea's paths ;
But ill the future guessing : for when God
Gave the Hellenes the glory of the battle,
In that same hour, with arms well wrought in bronze
Shielding their bodies, from their ships they leapt,
And the whole isle encircled, so that we 460
Were sore distressed,² and knew not where to turn ;
For here men's hands hurled many a stone at them ;
And there the arrows from the archer's bow
Smote and destroyed them ; and with one great rush,
At last advancing, they upon them dash
And smite, and hew the limbs of these poor wretches,
Till they each foe had utterly destroyed.
[And Xerxes when he saw how deep the ill,³
Groaned out aloud, for he had ta'en his seat,
With clear, wide view of all the army round,
On a high cliff hard by the open sea ;
And tearing then his robes with bitter cry, 470

¹ Sc., Psyttaleia, lying between Salamis and the mainland. Pausanias (i. 36-82) describes it in his time as having no artistic shrine or statue, but full everywhere of roughly carved images of Pan, to whom the island was sacred. It lay just opposite the entrance to the Peiræos. The connexion of Pan with Salamis and its adjacent islands seems implied in Sophocles, Aias, 695.

² The manœuvre was, we learn from Herodotos (viii. 95), the work of Aristeides, the personal friend of Æschylos, and the statesman with whose policy he had most sympathy.

³ The lines are noted as probably a spurious addition, by a weaker hand, to the text, as introducing surplusage, as inconsistent with Herodotos, and as faulty in their metrical structure.

THE PERSIANS

And giving orders to his troops on shore,
He sends them off in foul retreat. This grief
'Tis thine to mourn besides the former ills.]

Atoss. O hateful Power, how thou of all their hopes Hast robbed the Persians! Bitter doom my son
Devised for glorious Athens, nor did they,
The invading host who fell at Marathon,
Suffice; but my son, counting it his task
To exact requital for it, brought on him
So great a crowd of sorrows. But I pray,
As to those ships that have this fate escaped, 481
Where did'st thou leave them? Can'st thou clearly tell?

Mess. The captains of the vessels that were left,
With a fair wind, but not in meet array,
Took flight: and all the remnant of the army
Fell in Bœotia—some for stress of thirst
About the fountain clear, and some of us,
Panting for breath, cross to the Phokians' land,
The soil of Doris, and the Melian gulf,
Where fair Spercheios waters all the plains 491
With kindly flood, and then the Achæan fields
And city of the Thessali received us,
Famished for lack of food;¹ and many died
Of thirst and hunger, for both ills we bore;
And then to the Magnetian land we came,
And that of Macedonians, to the stream
Of Axios, and Bolbe's reed-grown marsh,
And Mount Pangaios and the Edonian land.
And on that night God sent a mighty frost,
Unwonted at that season, sealing up
The whole course of the Strymon's pure, clear flood;²

¹ So Herodotos (viii. 115) describes them as driven by hunger to eat even grass and leaves.

² No trace of this passage over the frozen Strymon appears in Herodotos, who leaves the reader to imagine that it was

And they who erst had deemed the Gods as nought, ⁵⁰⁰
 Then prayed with hot entreaties, worshipping
 Both earth and heaven. And after that the host
 Ceased from its instant calling on the Gods,
 It crosses o'er the glassy, frozen stream ;
 And whosoe'er set forth before the rays
 Of the bright God were shed abroad, was saved ;
 For soon the glorious sun with burning blaze
 Reached the mid-stream and warmed it with its flame,
 And they, confused, each on the other fell.
 Blest then was he whose soul most speedily
 Breathed out its life. And those who yet survived
 And gained deliverance, crossing with great toil ⁵¹⁰
 And many a pang through Thrakè, now are come,
 Escaped from perils, no great number they,

 Our country's dear-loved youth. Too true my tale,
 And many things I from my speech omit,
 Ills which the Persians suffer at God's hand.

Chor. O Power resistless, with what weight of woe
 On all the Persian race have thy feet leapt !

Atoss. Ah ! woe is me for that our army lost !
 O vision of the night that cam'st in dreams, ⁵²⁰
 Too clearly did'st thou show me of these ill !
 But ye (to Chorus) did judge them far too carelessly ;
 Yet since your counsel pointed to that course,
 I to the Gods will first my prayer address.
 And then with gifts to Earth and to the Dead,
 Bringing the chrism from my store, I'll come.

crossed, as before, by a bridge. It is hardly, indeed, consistent with dramatic probability that the courier should have remained to watch the whole retreat of the defeated army ; and on this and other grounds, the latter part of the speech has been rejected by some critics as a later addition.

THE PERSIANS

For our past ills, I know, 'tis all too late,
But for the future, I may hope, will dawn
A better fortune! But 'tis now your part
In these our present ills, in counsel faithful

Should he come here before me, comfort him,
And home escort him, lest he-add fresh ill
To all these evils that we suffer now.

Chor. Zeus our king, who now to nothing
Bring'st the army of the Persians,
Multitudinous, much boasting;
And with gloomy woe hast shrouded
Both Ecbatana and Susa;
Many maidens now are tearing
With their tender hands their mantles,
And with tear-floods wet their bosoms,
In the common grief partaking;
And the brides of Persian warriors,
Dainty even in their wailing,
Longing for their new-wed husbands,
Reft of bridal couch luxurious,
With its coverlet so dainty,
Losing joy of wanton youth-time,

Weeping for the loved and lost ones.

STROPHE III

Monarch, O ancient monarch, come, oh, come,
Come to the summit of sepulchral mound, 660
 Lifting thy foot encased
 In slipper saffron-dyed,
 And giving to our view
 Thy royal tiara's crest :¹
Speak, O Dareios, faultless father, speak.

ANTISTROPHE III

Yea, come, that thou, O Lord, may'st hear the woes,
Woes new and strange, our lord has now endured ;
 For on us now has fallen
 A dark and Stygian mist,
 Since all the armed youth
 Has perished utterly ;
Speak, O Dareios, faultless father, speak.

EPODE

 O thou, whose death thy friends
 Bewail with many tears, 670
 *Why thus, O Lord of lords,
*In double error of wild frenzy born,
 Have all our triremes good
 Been lost to this our land,
Ships that are ships no more, yea, ships no more ?

The Ghost of DAREIOS appears on the summit of the mound

Dar. O faithful of the Faithful, ye who were Companions of my youth, ye Persian elders,

¹ The description obviously gives the state dress of the Persian kings. They alone wore the tiara erect. Xen. Kyrop. viii. 3, 13.

THE PERSIANS

What troubles is't my country toils beneath ?
The whole plain groans, cut up and furrowed o'er,¹
And I, beholding now my queen beloved
Standing hard by my sepulchre, feared much, 680
And her libations graciously received ;
But ye wail loud near this my sepulchre,
And shouting shrill with cries that raise the dead,
Ye call me with your plaints. No easy task
Is it to come, for this cause above all,
That the great Gods who reign below are apter
To seize men than release : yet nathless I,
Being great in power among them, now am come.
Be quick then, that none blame me as too late ;²
What new dire evils on the Persians weigh ?

Chor. I fear to look on thee, 690
Fear before thee to speak,
With all the awe of thee I felt of old.

Dar. But since I came by thy complaints persuaded,
From below rising, spin no lengthened tale ;
But shortly, clearly speak, and tell thy story,
And leave awhile thine awe and fear of me.

Chor. I dread thy wish to grant,
*I dread to say thee nay,³
Saying things that it is hard for friends to speak.

Dar. Nay, then, since that old dread of thine prevents thee,

¹ Either that he has felt the measured tread of the mourners round his tomb, as they went wailing round and round, or that he has heard the rush of armies, and seen the plain tracked by chariot-wheels, and comes, not knowing all these things, to learn what it means.

² The words point to the widespread belief that when the souls of the dead were permitted to return to the earth, it was with strict limitations as to the time of their leave of absence.

³ Perhaps— "I dread to speak the truth."

THE PERSIANS

Do thou [to Atossa], the ancient partner of my bed, ⁷⁰⁰
My noble queen, from these thy plaints and moanings
Cease, and say something clearly. Human sorrows
May well on mortals fall ; for many evils,
Some on the sea, and some on dry land also,
Happen to men if life be far prolonged.

Atoss. O thou, who in the fate of fair good fortune
Excelled'st all men, who, while yet thou sawest
The sun's bright rays, did'st lead a life all blessed,
Admired, yea, worshipped as a God by Persians,
Now, too, I count thee blest in that thou died'st
Before thou saw'st the depth of these our evils.
For now, Dareios, thou shalt hear a story
Full, yet in briefest moment. Utter ruin,
To sum up all, is come upon the Persians. ⁷¹⁰

Dar. How so ? Hath plague or discord seized my country ?

Atoss. Not so, but all the host is lost near Athens.

Dar. What son of mine led that host hither, tell me ?¹

Atoss. Xerxes o'er-hasty, emptying all the mainland.

Dar. Made he this mad attempt by land or water ?

Atoss. By both ; two lines there were of two great armies.

Dar. How did so great a host effect its passage ?

Atoss. He bridged the straits of Helle, and found transit.

Dar. Did he prevail to close the mighty Bosphoros ?

Atoss. So was it ; yet some God, it may be, helped him. ⁷²⁰

Dar. Alas ! some great God came and stole his wisdom.

Atoss. Yea, the end shows what evil he accomplished.

¹ According to Herodotos (vii. 225) two brothers of Xerxes fell at Thermopylæ.

THE PERSIANS

Dar. And how have they fared, that ye thus bewail them ?

Atoss. The naval host, o'ercome, wrecked all the land-force.

Dar. What ! Is the whole host by the spear laid prostrate ?

Atoss. For this doth Susa's city mourn her losses.

Dar. Alas, for that brave force and mighty army !

Atoss. The Bactrians all are lost, not old men merely.

Dar. Poor fool ! how he hath lost his host's fresh vigour !

Atoss. Xerxes, they say, alone, with but few others 730

Dar. What is his end, and where ? Is there no safety ?

Atoss. Was glad to gain the bridge that joins two mainlands.

Dar. And has he reached this mainland ? Is that certain ?

Atoss. Yea, the report holds good. Here is no discord.¹

Dar. Ah me ! Full swift the oracles' fulfilment !

And on my son hath Zeus their end directed.

I hoped the Gods would work them out more slowly ;

But when man hastens, God too with him worketh.

And now for all my friends a fount of evils

Seems to be found. And this my son, not knowing, 740

In youth's rash mood, hath wrought ; for he did purpose

To curb the sacred Hellespont with fetters,

As though it were his slave, and sought to alter

The stream of God, the Bosporos, full-flowing,

And his well-hammered chains around it casting,

Prevailed to make his mighty host a highway ;

And though a mortal, thought, with no good counsel,

¹ As Herodotos (viii. 117) tells the story, the bridge had been broken by the tempest before Xerxes reached it.

THE PERSIANS

To master all the Gods, yea, e'en Poseidon.
Nay, was not my poor son oppressed with madness ?
And much I fear lest all my heaped-up treasure
Become the spoil and prey of the first comer.

Atoss. Such things the o'er-hasty Xerxes learns from others, 750

By intercourse with men of evil counsel ;¹
Who say that thou great wealth for thy son gained'st
By thy spear's might, while he with coward spirit
Does his spear-work indoors, and nothing addeth
Unto his father's glory. Such reproaches
Hearing full oft from men of evil counsel,
He planned this expedition against Hellas.

Dar. Thus then a deed portentous hath been wrought,
Ever to be remembered, such as ne'er
Falling on Susa made it desolate,
Since Zeus our king ordained this dignity,
That one man should be lord of Asia's plains.
Where feed her thousand flocks, and hold the rod 760
Of sovran guidance : for the Median first²
Ruled o'er the host, and then his son in turn
Finished the work, for reason steered his soul ;
And Kyros came as third, full richly blest,
And ruled, and gained great peace for all his friends ;
And he won o'er the Lydians and the Phrygians,

¹ Probably Mardonios and Onomacritos the Athenian sooth-sayer are referred to, who, according to Herodotos (vii. 6, viii. 99) were the chief instigators of the expedition.

² Astyages, the father-in-law of Kyaxares and grandfather of Kyros. In this case Æschylos must be supposed to accept Xenophon's statement that Kyaxares succeeded to Astyages. Possibly, however, the Median may be Kyaxares I., the father of Astyages, and so the succession here would harmonise with that of Herodotos. The whole succession must be looked on as embodying the loose, floating notions of the Athenians as to the history of their great enemy, rather than as the result of inquiry.

THE PERSIANS

And conquered all the wide Ionian land ;¹
For such his wisdom, he provoked not God.
And Kyros' son came fourth, and ruled the host ;
And Mardos fifth held sway, his country's shame,² 770
Shame to the ancient throne ; and him with guile
Artaphrenes³ the brave smote down, close leagued
With men, his friends, to whom the work was given.
[Sixth, Maraphis and seventh Artaphrenes,]
And I obtained this post that I desired,
And with a mighty host great victories won.
Yet no such evil brought I on the state ;
But my son Xerxes, young, thinks like a youth,
And all my solemn charge remembers not ;
For know this well, my old companions true, 780
'That none of us who swayed the realm of old,
Did e'er appear as working ills like these.

Chor. What then, O King Dareios ? 'To what end
Lead'st thou thy speech ? And how, in this our plight,
Could we, the Persian people, prosper best ?

Dar. If ye no more attack the Hellenes' land,
E'en though the Median host outnumbered theirs.
To them the very land is true ally.

Chor. What meanest thou ? How fights the land for them ?

Dar. *It slays with famine those vast multitudes. 790

¹ Stress is laid on the violence to which the Asiatic Ionians had succumbed, and their resistance to which distinguished them from the Lydians or Phrygians, whose submission had been voluntary.

² Mardos. Under this name we recognise the Pseudo-Smerdis of Herodotos (iii. 67), who, by restoring the dominion of the Median Magi, the caste to which he himself belonged, brought shame upon the Persians.

³ Possibly another form of Intaphernes, who appears in Herodotos (iii. 70) as one of the seven conspirators against the Magian Pseudo-Smerdis.

THE PERSIANS

Chor. We then a host, select, compact, will raise.

Dar. Nay, e'en the host which now in Hellas stays¹
Will ne'er return in peace and safety home.

Chor. How say'st thou ? Does not all the barbarous host

Cross from Europa o'er the straits of Hellè ?

Dar. But few of many ; if 'tis meet for one
Who looks upon the things already done
To trust the oracles of Gods ; for they,
Not these or those, but all, are brought to pass :
If this be so, then, resting on vain hopes,² 800
He leaves a chosen portion of his host :
And they abide where, watering all the plain,
Asôpos pours his fertilising stream
Dear to Bœotian land ; and there of ills
The topmost crown awaits them, penalty
Of wanton outrage and of godless thoughts ;
For they to Hellas coming, held not back
In awe from plundering sculptured forms of Gods³
And burning down their temples ; and laid low
Are altars, and the shrines of Gods o'erthrown,
E'en from their base. They therefore having wrought
Deeds evil, now are suffering, and will suffer
Evil not less, and not as yet is seen 810

² Comp. the speech of Mardonios urging his plan on Xerxes (Herod. viii. 100).

³ This was of course a popular topic with the Athenians, whose own temples had been outraged. But other sanctuaries also, the temples at Delphi and Abœ, had shared the same fate, and these sins against the Gods of Hellas were naturally connected in the thoughts of the Greeks with the subsequent disasters of the Persians. In Egypt these outrages had an iconoclastic character. In Athens they were a retaliation for the destruction of the temple at Sardis (Herod. v. 102).

THE PERSIANS

*E'en the bare groundwork of the ills, but still They grow up to completeness. Such a stream
Of blood and slaughter soon shall flow from them
By Dorian spear upon Platæan ground,¹
And heaps of corpses shall to children's children,
Though speechless, witness to the eyes of men
That mortal man should not wax overproud ;
For wanton pride from blossom grows to fruit,
The full corn in the ear, of utter woe,
And reaps a tear-fraught harvest. Seeing then,
Such recompense of these things, cherish well
The memory of Athens and of Hellas ; 820
Let no man in his scorn of present fortune,
And thirst for other, mar his good estate ;
Zeus is the avenger of o'er-lofty thoughts,
A terrible controller. Therefore now,
Since voice of God bids him be wise of heart,
Admonish him with counsel true and good
To cease his daring sacrilegious pride ;
And thou, O Xerxes' mother, old and dear,
Go to thy home, and taking what apparel
Is fitting, go to meet thy son ; for all 830
The costly robes around his limbs are torn
To rags and shreds in grief's wild agony.
But do thou gently soothe his soul with words ;
For he to thee alone will deign to hearken ;
But I must leave the earth for darkness deep :
And ye, old men, farewell, although in woe,
And give your soul its daily bread of joy ;
For to the dead no profit bringeth wealth.
[Exit, disappearing in the earth.]

¹ The reference to the prominent part taken by the Peloponnesian forces in the battle of Plataeæ is probably due to the political sympathies of the dramatist.

THE PERSIANS

Chor. I shudder as I hear the many woes
Both past and present that on Persians fall. 840

Atoss. [O God, how many evils fall on me !¹
And yet this one woe biteth more than all,
Hearing my son's shame in the rags of robes
That clothe his limbs. But I will go and take A fit adornment from my house, and try
To meet my son. We will not in his troubles
Basely abandon him whom most we love.]

STROPHE I

Chor. Ah me ! a glorious and a blessed life
Had we as subjects once,
When our old king, Dareios, ruled the land, 850
Meeting all wants, dispassionate, supreme,
A monarch like a God.

ANTISTROPHE I

For first we showed the world our noble hosts ;
And laws of tower-like strength
Directed all things ; and our backward march
After our wars unhurt, unsuffering led
Our prospering armies home.

STROPHE II

How many towns he took,
Not crossing Halys' stream ? 860
Nor issuing from his home,

¹ The speech of Atossa is rejected by Paley, on internal grounds, as spurious.

² Apparently an allusion to the oracle given to Croesos, that he, if he crossed the Halys, should destroy a great kingdom.

THE PERSIANS

There where in Strymon's sea,
The Acheloian Isles¹
Lie near the coasts of Thrakian colonies.

ANTISTROPHE II

And those that lie outside the Ægæan main,
The cities girt with towers,
They hearkened to our king ;
And those who boast their site
By Hellè's full, wide stream,
Propontis with its bays, and mouth of Pontos broad. 870

STROPHE III

And all the isles that lie
Facing the headland jutting in the sea,²
Close bound to this our coast ;
Lesbos, and Samos with its olive groves ;
Chios and Paros too ;
Naxos and Myconos, and Andros too
On Tenos bordering.

ANTISTROPHE III

And so he ruled the isles
That lie midway between the continents,
Lemnos, and Icaros,
Rhodos and Cnidos and the Kyprian towns, 880

² The geography is somewhat obscure, but the words seem to refer to the portion of the islands that are named as opposite (in a southerly direction) to the promontory of the Troad.

THE PERSIANS

Paphos and Soli famed,
And with them Salamis,
Whose parent city now our groans doth cause ;¹

EPODE

And many a wealthy town and populous,
Of Hellenes in the Ionian region dwelling,
 He by his counsel ruled ;
His was the unconquered strength of warrior host,
 Allies of mingled race.
And now, beyond all doubt,
In strife of war defeated utterly,
 We find this high estate
 Through wrath of God o'turned, 891
 And we are smitten low,
 By bitter loss at sea.

Enter XERXES in kingly apparel, but with his robes rent, with Attendants.

Xer. Oh, miserable me !
 Who this dark hateful doom
 That I expected least
 Have met with as my lot,
 With what stern mood and fierce
 Towards the Persian race
 Is God's hand laid on us !
 What woe will come on me ?
 Gone is my strength of limb,
 As I these elders see.
 Ah, would to Heaven, O Zeus,
 That with the men who fell

¹ Salamis in Kypros had been colonised by Teukros, the son of Aias, and had received its name in remembrance of the island in the Saronic Gulf.

THE PERSIANS

Death's doom had covered me !

900

Chor. Ah, woe, O King, woe ! woe !

For the army brave in fight,

And our goodly Persian name,

And the fair array of men,

Whom God hath now cut off !

And the land bewails its youth

Who for our Xerxes fell,

For him whose deeds have filled

*Hades with Persian souls ;

For many heroes now

*Are Hades-travellers,

Our country's chosen flower,

Mighty with darts and bow ;

*For lo ! the myriad mass

910

Of men has perished quite.

Woe, woe for our fair fame !

And Asia's land, O King,

Is terribly, most terribly, o'erthrown.

Xer. I then, oh misery !

Have to my curse been proved

Sore evil to my country and my race.

Chor. Yea, and on thy return

I will lift up my voice in wailing loud,

Cry of sore-troubled thought,

As of a mourner born

In Mariandynian land,¹

920

Lament of many tears.

ANTISTROPHE I

Xer. Yea, utter ye a wail

Dreary and full of grief ;

¹ The Mariandynoi, a Paphlagonian tribe, conspicuous for their orgiastic worship of Adonis, had become proverbial for the wildness of their plaintive dirges.

THE PERSIANS

For lo ! the face of Fate
Against me now is turned.

Chor. Yea, I will raise a cry
Dreary and full of grief,
Giving this tribute due
To all the people's woes,
And all our loss at sea,
Troubles of this our State
That mourneth for her sons ;
Yea, I will wail full sore,
With flood of bitter tears.

STROPHE II

Xer. For Ares, he whose might
Was in our ships' array,
Giving victory to our foes,
Has in Ionians, yea,
Ionians, found his match,
And from the dark sea's plain,
And that ill-omened shore,
Has a fell harvest reaped.

931

Chor. Yea, wail, search out the whole ;
Where are our other friends ?
Where thy companions true,
Such as Pharandakes,
Susas, Pelagon, Psammis, Dotamas,
Agdabatas, Susiskanes,
From Ecbatana who started ?

ANTISTROPHE II

Xer. I left them low in death,
Falling from Tyrian ship,
On Salaminian shores,
Beating now here, now there,
On the hard rock-girt coast.

THE PERSIANS

Chor. Ah, where Pharnuchos then,
And Ariomardos brave ?
And where Sevalkes king,
Lilæos proud of race,
Memphis and Tharybis,
Masistras, and Artembares,
Hystæchmas ? This I ask.

STROPHE III

Xer. Woe ! woe is me !
They have looked on at Athens' ancient towers,
Her hated towers, ah me !
All, as by one fell stroke,
Unhappy in their fate
Lie gasping on the shore.

Chor. And he, thy faithful Eye,¹
Who told the Persian host,
Myriads on myriads o'er,²
Alpistos, son and heir
Of Batanôchos old

* * * * *
And the son of brave Sesames,
Son himself of Megabates ?
Parthos, and the great Œbares,
Did'st thou leave them, did'st thou leave them ?
Ah, woe ! ah, woe is me,
For those unhappy ones !
Thou to the Persians brave
Tellest of ills on ills.

¹ The name seems to have been an official title for some Inspector-General of the Army. Comp. Aristoph. Acharn. v. 92.

² As in the account which Herodotos gives (vii. 60) of the way in which the army of Xerxes was numbered, sc., by enclosing 10,000 men in a given space, and then filling it again and again till the whole army had passed through.

THE PERSIANS

ANTISTROPHE III

Xer. Ah, thou dost wake in me
The memory of the spell of yearning love
For comrades brave and true,
Telling of cursed ills,
Yea, cursed, hateful doom ;
And lo, within my frame
My heart cries out, cries out.

970

Chor. Yea, another too we long for,
Xanthes, captain of ten thousand
Mardian warriors, and Anchares
Arian born, and great Arsakes
And Diæxis, lords of horsemen,
Kigdagatas and Lythimnas,
Tolmos, longing for the battle :
*Much I marvel, much I marvel,¹
For they come not, as the rear-guard
Of thy tent on chariot mounted.²

STROPHE IV

Xer. Gone those rulers of the army.

Chor. Gone are they in death inglorious.

Xer. Ah woe ! ah woe ! Alas ! alas !

Chor. Ah ! the Gods have sent upon us
Ill we never thought to look on,
Eminent above all others ;
Ne'er hath Atê seen its equal.

“ They are burned, they are buried.”

² Perhaps referring to the waggon-chariots in which the rider reclines at ease, either protected by a canopy, or, as in the Assyrian sculptures and perhaps in the East generally, overshadowed by a large umbrella which an eunuch holds over him

THE PERSIANS

ANTISTROPHE IV

Smitten we by many sorrows,
Such as come on men but seldom.

990

Chor. Smitten we, 'tis all too certain. . . .

Xer. Fresh woes ! fresh woes ! ah me !

Chor. Now with adverse turn of fortune,
With Ionian seamen meeting,
Fails in war the race of Persians.

STROPHE V

Xer. Too true. Yea I and that vast host of mine
Are smitten down.

Chor. Too true—the Persians' majesty and might Have perished utterly.

Xer. See'st thou this remnant of my armament ?

Chor. I see it, yea, I see.

Xer. (pointing to his quiver.) Dost see thou that which arrows wont to hold ? . . .

Chor. What speak'st thou of as saved ?

Xer. This treasure-store for darts.

Xer. Thus we all helpers lack.

Chor. Ionian soldiers flee not from the spear.

ANTISTROPHE V

Xer. Yea, very brave are they, and I have seen
Unlooked-for woe.

Chor. Wilt tell of squadron of our sea-borne ships Defeated utterly ?

Xer. I tore my robes at this calamity.

Chor. Ah me, ah me, ah me !

1010

Xer. Ay, more than all 'ah me's' !

Chor. Two-fold and three-fold ills !

Xer. Grievous to us—but joy,
Great joy, to all our foes !

THE PERSIANS

Chor. Lopped off is all our strength.

Xer. Stripped bare of escort I !

Chor. Yea, by sore loss at sea
Disastrous to thy friends.

STROPHE VI

Xer. Weep for our sorrow, weep,
Yea, go ye to the house.

Chor. Woe for our griefs, woe, woe !

Xer. Cry out an echoing cry.

Chor. Ill gift of ills on ills.

1020

Xer. Weep on in wailing chant.

Chor. Oh ! ah ! Oh ! ah !

Xer. Grievous our bitter woes.

Chor. Ah me, I mourn them sore.

ANTISTROPHE VI

Xer. Ply, ply your hands and groan ;
Yea, for my sake bewail.

Chor. I weep in bitter grief.

Xer. Cry out an echoing cry.

Chor. Yea, we may raise our voice,
O Lord and King, in wail.

Xer. Raise now shrill cry of woe.

Chor. Ah me ! Ah ! Woe is me !

1030

Xer. Yea, with it mingle dark. . . .

Chor. And bitter, grievous blows.

STROPHE VII

Xer. Yea, beat thy breast, and cry
After the Mysian type.

Chor. Oh, misery ! oh, misery !

Xer. Yea, tear the white hair off thy flowing beard.

THE PERSIANS

Chor. Yea; with clenched hands, with clenched hands, I say,

In very piteous guise.

Xer. Cry out, cry out aloud.

Chor. That also will I do.

ANTISTROPHE VII

Xer. And with thy fingers tear
Thy bosom's folded robe.

Chor. Oh, misery! oh, misery! 1040

Xer. Yea, tear thy hair in wailing for our host.

Chor. Yea, with clenched hands, I say, with clenched hands,

In very piteous guise.

Xer. Be thine eyes wet with tears.

Chor. Behold the tears stream down.

EPODE

Xer. Raise a re-echoing cry.

Chor. Ah woe! ah woe!

Xer. Go to thy home with wailing loud and long.

Chor. O land of Persia, full of lamentations!

Xer. Through the town raise your cries.

Chor. We raise them, yea, we raise. 1050

Xer. Wail, wail, ye men that walked so daintily.

Chor. O land of Persia, full of lamentations!

Woe; woe!

Xer. Alas for those who in the triremes perished!

Chor. With broken cries of woe will I escort thee.

[Exeunt in procession, wailing, and rending their robes.]

THE SEVEN WHO FOUGHT AGAINST THEBES.

ETEOCLES	ISMENE
Scout	ANTIGONE
Herald	Chorus of Theban Maidens

ARGUMENT.—When Œdipus king of Thebes discovered that he had unknowingly been the murderer of his father, and had lived in incest with his mother, he blinded himself. And his two sons, Eteocles and Polyneikes, wishing to banish the remembrance of these horrors from the eyes of men, at first kept him in confinement. And he, being wroth with them, prayed that they might divide their inheritance with the sword. And they, in fear lest the prayer should be accomplished, agreed to reign in turn, each for a year, and Eteocles, as the elder of the two, took the first turn. But when at the end of the year Polyneikes came to ask for the kingdom, Eteocles refused to give way, and sent him away empty. So Polyneikes went to Argos and married the daughter of Adrastus the king of that country, and gathered together a great army under six great captains, himself going as the seventh, and led it against Thebes. And so they compassed it about, and at each of the seven gates of the city was stationed one of the divisions of the army.

Note.—The Seven against Thebes appears to have been produced B.C. 472, the year after The Persians.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

SCENE.—THEBES in front of the Acropolis

Enter ETEOCLES, and crowd of Theban Citizens.

Eteoc. Ye citizens of Cadmos, it behoves
That one who standeth at the stern of State
Guiding the helm, with eyes unclosed in sleep,
Should speak the things that meet occasion's need.
For should we prosper, God gets all the praise :
But if (which God forbid !) disaster falls,
Eteocles, much blame on one head falling,
Would find his name the by-word of the State,¹
Sung in the slanderous ballads of the town ;
Yes, and with groanings, which may Zeus the Averter,
True to his name, from us Cadmeians turn !
But now 'tis meet for all, both him who fails 10
Of full-grown age, and him advanced in years,
Ye, boasting still a stalwart strength of frame,
And each in life's full prime, as it is fit,
The State to succour and the altars here
Of these our country's Gods, that never more
Their votive honours cease,—to help our sons,
And Earth, our dearest mother and kind nurse ;
For she, when young ye crept her kindly plain,
Bearing the whole charge of your nourishment,

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Reared you as denizens that bear the shield,
That ye should trusty prove in this her need. 20
And now thus far God turns the scale for us ;
For unto us, beleaguered these long days,
War doth in most things with God's help speed well,
But now, as saith the seer, the augur skilled,¹
Watching with ear and mind, apart from fire,
The birds oracular with mind unerring,
He, lord and master of these prophet-arts,
Says that the great attack of the Achæans
This very night is talked of, and their plots
Devised against the town. But ye, haste all 30
Unto the walls and gateways of the forts ;
Rush ye full-armed, and fill the outer space,
And stand upon the platforms of the towers,
And at the entrance of the gates abiding
Be of good cheer, nor fear ye overmuch
The host of aliens. Well will God work all.
And I have sent my scouts and watchers forth,
And trust their errand is no fruitless one.
I shall not, hearing them, be caught with guile.

[Exeunt Citizens.]

Enter one of the Scouts.

Mess. King of Cadmeians, great Eteocles,
I from the army come with tidings clear, 40
And am myself eye-witness of its acts ;
For seven brave warriors, leading armed bands,
Cutting a bull's throat o'er a black-rimmed shield,
And dipping in the bull's blood with their hands,
Swore before Ares, Enyo,² murderous Fear,

¹ Teiresias, as in Sophocles (Antig. v. 1005), sitting, though blind, and listening, as the birds flit by him, and the flames burn steadily or fitfully ; a various reading gives "apart from sight."

² Enyo, the goddess of war, and companion of Ares.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

That they would bring destruction on our town,
And trample under foot the tower of Cadmos,
Or dying, with their own blood stain our soil ;
And they memorials for their sires at home
Placed with their hands upon Adrastos' car,¹ 50
Weeping, but no wail uttering with their lips,
For courage iron-hearted breathed out fire
In manliness unconquered, as when lions
Flash battle from their eyeballs. And report
Of these things does not linger on the way.
I left them casting lots, that each might take,
As the lot fell, his station at the gate.
Wherefore do thou our city's chosen ones
Array with speed at entrance of the gates ;
For near already is the Argive host,
Marching through clouds of dust, and whitening foam 60
Spots all the plain with drops from horses' mouths.
And thou, as prudent helmsman of the ship,
Guard thou our fortress ere the blasts of Ares
Swoop on it wildly ; for there comes the roar
Of the land-wave of armies. And do thou
Seize for these things the swiftest tide and time ;
And I, in all that comes, will keep my eye
As faithful sentry ; so through speech full clear,
Thou, knowing all things yonder, shalt be safe.

Eteoc. O Zeus and Earth, and all ye guardian Gods !
Thou Curse and strong Erinnyes of my sire ! 70
Destroy ye not my city root and branch,

¹ Amphiaraios the seer had prophesied that Adrastos alone should return home in safety. On his car, therefore, the other chieftains hung the clasps, or locks of hair, or other memorials which in the event of their death were to be taken to their parents.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

With sore destruction smitten, one whose voice
Is that of Hellas, nor our hearths and homes ;¹
Grant that they never hold in yoke of bondage
Our country free, and town of Cadmos named ;
But be ye our defence. I deem I speak
Of what concerns us both ; for still 'tis true,
A prosperous city honours well the Gods. [Exit

Enter Chorus of Theban Maidens in solemn procession as suppliants

Chor. I in wild terror utter cries of woe ;
An army leaves its camp and is let loose :
Hither the vanguard of the horsemen flows, 80
And the thick cloud of dust,
That suddenly is seen,
Dumb herald, yet full clear,
Constrains me to believe ;
And smitten with the horses' hoofs, the plain
Of this my country rings with noise of war ;
It floats and echoes round,
Like voice of mountain torrent dashing down
Resistless in its might.
Ah Gods ! Ah Goddesses !
Ward off the coming woe.
With battle-shout that rises o'er the walls,
The host whose shields are white ² 90

¹ The Hellenic feeling, such as the Platæans appealed to in the Peloponnesian war (Thuc. iii. 58, 59), that it was noble and right for Hellenes to destroy a city of the barbarians, but that they should spare one belonging to a people of their own stock.

² The characteristic feature of the Argive soldiers was, that they bore a shield painted white (comp. Sophocles, Antig. v. 114). The leaders alone appear to have embellished this with devices and mottoes.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Marches in full array against our city.

Who then, of all the Gods
Or Goddesses, will come to help and save?
Say, shall I fall before the shrines of Gods?

O blessed Ones firm fixed!
'Tis time to clasp your sacred images.
Why linger we in wailing overmuch?
Hear ye, or hear ye not, the din of shields?

When, if not now, shall we Engage in prayer with peplos and with boughs?¹
I hear a mighty sound; it is the din

100

Not of a single spear.
O Ares! ancient guardian of our land!
What wilt thou do? Wilt thou betray thy land?

O God of golden casque,
Look on our city, yea, with favour look,
The city thou did'st love.

And ye, ye Gods who o'er the city rule,
Come all of you, come all.

Behold the band of maidens suppliant,
In fear of bondage foul;

For now around the town
The wave of warriors bearing sloped crests,
With blasts of Ares rushing, hoarsely sounds:

110

But thou, O Zeus! true father of us all,
Ward off, ward off our capture by the foe.

STROPHE I

For Argives now surround the town of Cadmos,
And dread of Ares' weapons falls on us;
And, bound to horses' mouths,

¹ In solemn supplications, the litanies of the ancient world, especially in those to Pallas, the suppliants carried with them in procession the shawl or peplos of the Goddess, and with it

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

The bits and curbs ring music as of death ;
And seven chief rulers of the mighty host,
With warriors' arms, at each of seven tall gates,
 Spear-armed and harnessed all,
Stand, having cast their lots.

MESODE

And thou, O Zeus-born power in war delighting, 120
O Pallas ! be our city's saviour now ;
 And Thou who curb'st the steed,
 Great King of Ocean's waves,
Poseidon, with thy trident fish-spear armed,¹
Give respite from our troubles, respite give !
And Thou, O Ares, guard the town that takes Its name from Cadmos old,²
Watch o'er it visibly.

ANTISTROPHE I

And thou, O Kypris, of our race the mother,
Ward off these ills, for we are thine by blood :
 To thee in many a prayer, 130
With voice that calls upon the Gods we cry,
And unto thee draw near as suppliants :

enwrap her statue. To carry boughs of trees in the hands was one of the uniform, probably indispensable, accompaniments of such processions.

¹ The words recall our thoughts to the original use of the trident, which became afterwards a symbol of Poseidon, as employed by the sailors of Hellas to spear or harpoon the larger fish of the Archipelago. Comp. Pers v. 426, where the slaughter of a defeated army is compared to tunny-fishing.

² Cadmos, probably "the man from the East," the Phœnikian who had founded Thebes, and sown the dragon's seed, and taught men a Semitic alphabet for the non-Semitic speech of Hellas.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

And Thou, Lykeian king, Lykeian be,¹
Foe of our hated foes,
For this our wailing cry ;
And Thou, O child of Leto, Artemis,
Make ready now thy bow.

STROPHE II

Ah ! ah ! I hear a din of chariot wheels
Around the city walls ;
O Hera great and dread !
The heavy axles of the chariots groan, 140
O Artemis beloved !
And the air maddens with the clash of spears ;
What must our city bear ?
What now shall come on us ?
When will God give the end ?

ANTISTROPHE II

Ah ! ah ! a voice of stones is falling fast
On battlements attacked ;²
O Lord, Apollo loved,
A din of bronze-bound shields is in the gates ;
And oh ! that Zeus may give 150
A faultless issue of this war we wage !
And Thou, O blessed queen,
As Guardian Onca known,³
Save thy seven-gated seat.

² Possibly "from battlements attacked." In the primitive sieges of Greek warfare stones were used as missiles alike by besieged and besiegers

³ The name of Onca belonged especially to the Theban worship of Pallas, and was said to have been of Phœnikian origin,

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

STROPHE III

And ye, all-working Gods,
Of either sex divine,
Protectors of our towers,
Give not our city, captured by the spear,
To host of alien speech.¹
Hear ye our maidens ; hear, 160
As is most meet, our prayers with outstretched hands.

ANTISTROPHE III

O all ye loving Powers,
Compass our State to save ;
Show how that State ye love ;
Think on our public votive offerings,
And as ye think, oh, help :
Be mindful ye, I pray,
Of all our city's rites of sacrifice.

Re-enter ETEOCLES

Eteoc. (to the Chorus) I ask you, O ye brood intolerable,
Is this course best and safest for our city ? 170
Will it give heart to our beleaguered host,
That ye before the forms of guardian Gods
Should wail and howl, ye loathed of the wise ;²

introduced by Cadmos. There seems, however, to have been a town Onkæ in Bœotia, with which the name was doubtless connected.

¹ " Alien," on account of the difference of dialect between the speech of Argos and that of Bœotia, though both were Hellenic.

² The vehemence with which Eteocles reproves the wild frenzied wailing of the Chorus may be taken as an element of the higher culture showing itself in Athenian life, which led

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Ne'er be it mine, in ill estate or good,
To dwell together with the race of women ;
For when they rule, their daring bars approach,
And when they fear, alike to house and State
Comes greater ill : and now with these your rushings
Hither and thither, ye have troubled sore
Our subjects with a coward want of heart ;
And do your best for those our foes without ; 180
And we are harassed by ourselves within.
This comes to one who dwells with womankind.
And if there be that will not own my sway,
Or man or woman in their prime, or those Who can be classed with neither, they shall take
Their trial for their life, nor shall they 'scape
The fate of stoning. Things outdoors are still
The man's to look to : let not woman counsel.
Stay thou within, and do no mischief more.
Hear'st thou, or no ? or speak I to the deaf ?

STROPHE I

Chor. Dear son of Œdipus, 190
I shuddered as I heard the din, the din
Of many a chariot's noise,
When on the axles creaked the whirling wheels,
*And when I heard the sound
*Of fire-wrought curbs within the horses' mouths.
Eteoc. What then ? Did ever yet the sailor flee
From stern to stem, and find deliverance so,
While his ship laboured in the ocean's wave ?¹

Solon to restrain such lamentations by special laws (Plutarch, Solon, c. 20). Here, too, we note in Æschylos an echo of the teaching of Epimenides.

¹ As now the sailor of the Mediterranean turns to the image of his patron saint, so of old he ran in his distress to the figure

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

ANTISTROPHE I

Chor. Nay, to the ancient forms
Of mighty Powers I rushed, as trusting Gods ;
And when behind the gates
Was heard the crash of fierce and pelting storm, 200
Then was it, in my fear,
I prayed the Blessed Ones to guard our city.
Eteoc. Pray that our towns hold out 'gainst spear of foes.¹
Chor. Do not the Gods grant these things ?
Eteoc. Nay the Gods,
So say they, leave the captured city's walls.²

STROPHE II

Chor. Ah ! never in my life
May all this goodly company of Gods
Depart ; nor may I see
This city scene of rushings to and fro, 210
*And hostile army burning it with fire !
Eteoc. Nay, call not on the Gods with counsel base ;
Obedience is the mother of success,
Child strong to save. 'Tis thus the saying runs.

of his God upon the prow of his ship (often, as in Acts xxviii. 11, that of the Dioscuri), and called to it for deliverance (comp. Jonah i. 8).

¹ Eteocles seems to wish for a short, plain prayer for deliverance, instead of the cries and supplications and vain repetitions of the Chorus.

² The thought thus expressed was, that the Gods, yielding to the mightier law of destiny, or in their wrath at the guilt of men, left the city before its capture. The feeling was all but universal. Its two representative instances are found in Virgil, Æn. 351—

“ Excessere omnes adytis arisque relictis
Di quibus imperium hoc steterat ; ” and the narrative given alike by Tacitus (Hist. v. 13), and Josephus (Bell. Jud. vi. 5, 3), that the cry “ Let us depart hence,” was heard at midnight through the courts of the Temple, before the destruction of Jerusalem.

ANTISTROPHE II

Chor. True is it ; but the Gods
Have yet a mightier power, and oftentimes,
In pressure of sore ill,
It raises one perplexed from direst ~~Woe~~,
When dark clouds gather thickly o'er his eyes.

Eteoc. 'Tis work of men to offer sacrifice
And victims to the Gods, when foes press hard ; 220
Thine to be dumb and keep within the house.

STROPHE III

Chor. 'Tis through the Gods we live
In city unsubdued, and that our towers
Ward off the multitude of jealous foes.

What Power will grudge us this ?

Eteoc. I grudge not your devotion to the Gods ;
But lest you make my citizens faint-hearted
Be tranquil, nor to fear's excess give way.

ANTISTROPHE III

Chor. Hearing but now a din
Strange, wildly mingled, I with shrinking fear
Here to our city's high Acropolis,

Time-hallowed spot, have come. 230

Eteoc. Nay, if ye hear of wounded men or dying,
Bear them not swiftly off with wailing loud ;
*For blood of men is Ares' chosen food.¹

Chor. Hark ! now I hear the panting of the steeds.

Eteoc. Clear though thou hear, yet hear not over-much.

Chor. Lo ! from its depths the fortress groans, beleaguered.

¹ Sc., Blood must be shed in war. Ares would not be Ares without it. It is better to take it as it comes.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Eteoc. It is enough that I provide for this.

Chor. I fear : the din increases at the gates.

Eteoc. Be still, say nought of these things in the city.

Chor. O holy Band !¹ desert ye not our towers. 240

Eteoc. A curse fall on thee ! wilt thou not be still ?

Chor. Gods of my city, from the slave's lot save me !

Eteoc. 'Tis thou enslav'st thyself and all thy city.

Chor. Oh, turn thy darts, great Zeus, against our foes !

Eteoc. Oh, Zeus, what race of women thou hast given us !

Chor. A sorry race, like men whose city falls.

Eteoc. What ? Cling to these statues, yet speak words of ill ?

Chor. Fear hurries on my tongue in want of courage.

Eteoc. Could'st thou but grant one small boon at my prayer ! 250

Chor. Speak it out quickly, and I soon shall know.

Eteoc. Be still, poor fool, and frighten not thy friends.

Chor. Still am I, and with others bear our fate.

Eteoc. These words of thine I much prefer to those :
And further, though no longer at the shrines,
Pray thou for victory, that the Gods fight with us.
And when my prayers thou hearest, then do thou
Raise a loud, welcome, holy pæan-shout,
The Hellenes' wonted cry at sacrifice ;
So cheer thy friends, and check their fear of foes ;
And I unto our country's guardian Gods, 260
Who hold the plain or watch the agora,
The springs of Dirke, and Ismenos' stream ;—
If things go well, and this our city's saved,—
I vow that staining with the blood of sheep

¹ Sc., the company of Gods, Pallas, Hera and the others whom the Chorus had invoked.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

The altar-hearths of Gods, or slaying bulls,
We'll fix our trophies, and our foemen's robes
On the spear's point on consecrated walls,
Before the shrines I'll hang.¹ Pray thou this prayer,
Not weakly wailing, nor with vain wild sobs,
For no whit more thou'lt 'scape thy destined lot : 270
And I six warriors, with myself as seventh,
Against our foes in full state like their own,
Will station at the seven gates' entrances,
Ere hurrying heralds and swift-rushing words
Come and inflame them in the stress of need. [Exit

STROPHE I

Chor. My heart is full of care and knows not sleep,
By panic fear o'ercome ;
And troubles throng my soul,
And set a-glow my dread
Of the great host encamped around our walls,
As when a trembling dove
Fears, for her callow brood, 280
The snakes that come, ill mates for her soft nest ;
For some upon our towers
March in full strength of mingled multitude ;
And what will me befall ?
And others on our men on either hand
Hurl rugged blocks of stone.
In every way, ye Zeus-born Gods, defend 290
The city and the host
That Cadmos claim as sire.

¹ Reference to this custom, which has passed from Pagan temples into Christian churches, is found in the Agamemnon, v. 562. It was connected, of course, with the general practice of offering as ex votos any personal ornaments or clothing as a token of thanksgiving for special mercies.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

ANTISTROPHE I

What better land will ye receive for this,
If ye to foes resign
This rich and fertile clime,
And that Dirkæan stream,
Goodliest of founts by great Poseidon sent,
Who circleth earth, or those
Who Tethys parent call?¹ 300
And therefore, O ye Gods that guard our city, Sending on those without
Our towers a woe that robs men of their life,
And makes them lose their shield,
Gain glory for these countrymen of mine;
And take your standing-ground,
As saviours of the city, firm and true,
In answer to our cry
Of wailing and of prayer.

STROPHE II

For sad it were to hurl to Hades dark
A city of old fame, 310
The spoil and prey of war,
With foulest shame in dust and ashes laid,
By an Achæan foe at God's decree;
And that our women, old and young alike,
Be dragged away, ah me!
Like horses, by their hair
Their robes torn off from them.
And lo, the city wails, made desolate, 320
While with confused cry
The wretched prisoners meet doom worse than death.
Ah, at this grievous fate
I shudder ere it comes.

¹ Rivers and streams as the children of Tethys and Okeanos.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

ANTISTROPHE II

And piteous 'tis for those whose youth is fresh,
Before the rites that cull
Their fair and first-ripe fruit,
To take a hateful journey from their homes.
Nay, but I say the dead far better fare
Than these, for when a city is subdued
It bears full many an ill.
This man takes prisoner that,
Or slays, or burns with fire ;
And all the city is defiled with smoke,
And Ares fans the flame
In wildest rage, and laying many low,
Tramples with foot unclean
On all men sacred hold.

STROPHE III

And hollow din is heard throughout the town,
Hemmed in by net of towers ;
And man by man is slaughtered with the spear,
And cries of bleeding babes,
Of children at the breast,
Are heard in piteous wail,
And rapine, sister of the plunderer's rush,
Spoiler with spoiler meets,
And empty-handed empty-handed calls,
Wishing for share of gain,
Both eager for a portion no whit less,
For more than equal lot
With what they deem the others' hands have found.

ANTISTROPHE III

And all earth's fruits cast wildly on the ground,
Meeting the cheerless eye

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Of frugal housewives, give them pain of heart ;
 And many a gift of earth
 In formless heaps is whirled
 In waves of nothingness ;
And the young maidens know a sorow new ;
 For now the foe prevails,
And gains rich prize of wretched captive's bed ; 360
 And now their only hope
Is that the night of death will come at last,
 Their truest, best ally,
To rescue them from sorrow fraught with tears.

Enter ETEOCLES, followed by his Chief Captains, and by the Scout

Semi-Chor. A. The army scout, so deem I, brings to us,
Dear friends, some tidings new, with quickest speed
Plying the nimble axles of his feet.

Semi-Chor. B. Yea, the king's self, the son of Œdipus,
Is nigh to hear the scout's exact report ;
And haste denies him too an even step.

Mess. I knowing well, will our foes' state report, 370
How each his lot hath stationed at the gates.
At those of Prætos, Tydeus thunders loud,
And him the prophet suffers not to cross
Ismenos' fords, the victims boding ill.¹
And Tydeus, raging eager for the fight,
Shouts like a serpent in its noon-tide scream,

¹ Here, as in v. 571, Tydeus appears as the real leader of the expedition, who had persuaded Adrastus and the other chiefs to join in it, and Amphiaraus, the prophet, the son of Œcleus, as having all along foreseen its disastrous issue. The account of the expedition in the Œdipus at Colonus (1300-1330) may be compared with this.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

And on the prophet, Œcleus' son, heaps shame,
That he, in coward fear, doth crouch and fawn
Before the doom and peril of the fight.
And with such speech he shakes his triple crest,
O'ershadowing all his helm, and 'neath his shield 380
Bells wrought in bronze ring out their chimes of fear ;
And on his shield he bears this proud device,—
A firmament enchased, all bright with stars ;¹
And in the midst the full moon's glittering orb,
Sovran of stars and eye of Night, shines forth.
And thus exulting in o'er boastful arms,
By the stream's bank he shouts in lust of war,
[E'en as a war-horse panting in his strength
Against the curb that galls him, who at sound
Of trumpet's clang chafes hotly.] Whom wilt thou
Set against him ? Who is there strong enough
When the bolts yield, to guard the Prætan gates ? 390

Eteoc. No fear have I of any man's array ;
Devices have no power to pierce or wound,
And crest and bells bite not without a spear ;
And for this picture of the heavens at night,
Of which thou tellest, glittering on his shield,
*Perchance his madness may a prophet prove ;
For if night fall upon his dying eyes,
Then for the man who bears that boastful sign
It may right well be all too truly named, 400
And his own pride shall prophet be of ill.
And against Tydeus, to defend the gates,
I'll set this valiant son of Astacos ;

¹ The legend of the Medusa's head on the shield of Athena shows the practice of thus decorating shields to have been of remote date. In Homer it does not appear as common, and the account given of the shield of Achilles lays stress upon the work of the artist (Hephæstos) who wrought the shield in relief, not, as here, upon painted insignia. They were obviously common in the time of Æschylos.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Noble is he, and honouring well the throne
Of Reverence, and hating vaunting speech,
Slow to all baseness, unattuned to ill :
And of the dragon-race that Ares spared¹
He as a scion grows, a native true,
E'en Melanippos ; Ares soon will test
His valour in the hazard of the die :
And kindred Justice sends him forth to war,
For her that bore him foeman's spear to check. 410

STROPHE I

Chor. May the Gods grant my champion good success !

For justly he goes forth
For this our State to fight ;
But yet I quake with fear

To see the deaths of those who die for friends.

Mess. Yea, may the Gods give good success to him !
The Electran gates have fallen to Capaneus,
A second giant, taller far than he
Just named, with boast above a mortal's bounds ;
And dread his threats against our towers (O Fortune, 420 Turn them aside !)—for whether God doth will,
Or willeth not, he says that he will sack²
The city, nor shall e'en the wrath of Zeus,
On the plain swooping, turn him from his will ;
And the dread lightnings and hot thunderbolts
He likens to the heat of noon-day sun.

¹ The older families of Thebes boasted that they sprang from the survivors of the Sparti, who, sprung from the Dragon's teeth, waged deadly war against each other, till all but five were slain. The later settlers, who were said to have come with Cadmos, stood to these as the "greater" to the "lesser gentes" at Rome.

² So in the Antigone of Sophocles (v. 134), Capaneus appears as the special representative of boastful, reckless impiety.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

And his device, the naked form of one
Who bears a torch ; and bright the blaze shines forth
And in gold characters he speaks the words,
"THE CITY I WILL BURN." Against this man
Send forth . . . but who will meet him in the fight ? 430

Who, without fear, await this warrior proud ?

Eteoc. Herein, too, profit upon profit comes ;
And 'gainst the vain and boastful thoughts of men,
Their tongue itself is found accuser true.

Threatening, equipped for work is Capaneus,
Scorning the Gods : and giving speech full play,
And in wild joy, though mortal, vents at Zeus,
High in the heavens, loud-spoken foaming words.

And well I trust on him shall rightly come
Fire-bearing thunder, nothing likened then
To heat of noon-day sun. And so 'gainst him, 440
Though very bold of speech, a man is set
Of fiery temper, Polyphontes strong,
A trusty bulwark, by the loving grace
Of guardian Artemis¹ and other Gods.
Describe another, placed at other gates.

ANTISTROPHE I

Chor. A curse on him who 'gainst our city boasts !
May thunder smite him down 450
Before he force his way
Into my home, and drive

Me from my maiden bower with haughty spear ?

Mess. And now I'll tell of him who by the gates
Stands next ; for to Eteocles, as third,
To march his cohort to Neïstian gates,

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Leaped the third lot from upturned brazen helm :
And he his mares, in head-gear snorting, whirls,
Full eager at the gates to fall and die ;
Their whistling nozzles of barbaric mode,
Are filled with loud blast of the panting nostrils.¹
In no poor fashion is his shield devised ; 460
A full-armed warrior climbs a ladder's rungs,
And mounts his foeman's towers as bent to sack ;
And he too cries, in words of written speech,
That "NOT E'EN ARES FROM THE TOWERS SHALL DRIVE HIM."

Send thou against him some defender true,
To ward the yoke of bondage from our State.
Eteoc. Such would I send now ; by good luck indeed
He has been sent, his vaunting in his deeds,
Megareus, Creon's son, who claims descent
From those as Sparti known, and not by noise 470
Of neighings loud of warlike steeds dismayed,
Will he the gates abandon, but in death
Will pay our land his nurture's debt in full,²
Or taking two men, and a town to boot,
(That on the shield,) will deck his father's house
With those his trophies. Of another tell
The bragging tale, nor grudge thy words to me.

STROPHE II

Chor. Him I wish good success,
O guardian of my home, and for his foes
All ill success I pray ;

¹ Apparently an Asiatic invention, to increase the terror of an attack of war-chariots.

² The phrase and thought were almost proverbial in Athens. Men, as citizens, were thought of as fed at a common table, bound to contribute their gifts to the common stock. When

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

And since against our land their haughty words

With maddened soul they speak,

May Zeus, the sovran judge,

With fiery, hot displeasure look on them !

480

Mess. Another stands as fourth at gates hard by,

Onca-Athenà's, with a shout of war,

Hippomedon's great form and massive limbs ;

And as he whirled his orb, his vast shield's disk,

I shuddered ; yea, no idle words I speak.

No cheap and common draughtsman sure was he

Who wrought this cunning ensign on his shield :

Typhon emitting from his lips hot blast

Of darkling smoke, the flickering twin of fire :

And round the belly of the hollow shield

A rim was made with wreaths of twisted snakes.

490

And he too shouts his war-cry, and in frenzy,

As man possessed by Ares, hastes to battle,

Like Thyiad, darting terror from his eyes.¹

'Gainst such a hero's might we well may guard ;

Already at the gates men brag of rout.

Eteoc. First, the great Onca-Pallas, dwelling nigh

Our city's gates, and hating man's bold pride,

Shall ward him from her nestlings like a snake

Of venom dread ; and next Hyperbios,

The stalwart son of Cænops, has been chosen,

500

A hero 'gainst this hero, willing found

To try his destiny at Fortune's hest.

No fault has he in form, or heart, or arms ;

And Hermes with good reason pairs them off ;

For man with man will fight as enemy,

they offered up their lives in battle, they were giving, as Pericles says (Thucyd. ii. 43), their noblest "contribution," paying in full their subscription to the society of which they were members.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

And on their shields they'll bring opposing Gods ;
For this man beareth Typhon, breathing fire,
And on Hyperbios' shield sits father Zeus,
Full firm, with burning thunderbolt in hand ;
And never yet has man seen Zeus, I trow,
O'ercome. Such then the favour of the Gods, 510
We with the winners, they with losers are :¹
Good reason then the rivals so should fare,
If Zeus than Typhon stronger be in fight,
And to Hyperbios Zeus will saviour prove,
As that device upon his shield presents him.

ANTISTROPHE II

Chor. Now do I trust that he
Who bears upon his shield the hated form
Of Power whom Earth doth shroud,
Antagonist to Zeus, unloved by men
And by the ageless Gods,
Before those gates of ours
To his own hurt may dash his haughty head. 520

Mess. So may it be ! And now the fifth I tell,
Who the fifth gates, the Northern, occupies,
Hard by Amphion's tomb, the son of Zeus ;
And by his spear he swears, (which he is bold
To honour more than God or his own eyes,)
That he will sack the fort of the Cadmeians
With that spear's might. So speaks the offspring fair
Of mother mountain-bred, a stripling hero ;
And the soft down is creeping o'er his cheeks, 530
Youth's growth, and hair that floweth full and thick ;

¹ Sc., in the legends of Typhon, not he, but Zeus, had proved the conqueror. The warrior, therefore, who chose Typhon for his badge was identifying himself with the losing, not the winning side.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

And he with soul, not maiden's like his name,¹
But stern, with flashing eye, is standing there.
Nor stands he at the gate without a vaunt ;
For on his brass-wrought buckler, strong defence,
Full-orbed, his body guarding, he the shame
Of this our city bears, the ravenous Sphinx,
With rivets fixed, all burnished and embossed ;²
And under her she holdeth a Cadmeian,
That so on him most arrows might be shot.
No chance that he will fight a peddling fight, 540
Nor shame the long, long journey he hath come,
Parthenopæos, in Arcadia born :
This man did Argos welcome as a guest,
And now he pays her for her goodly rearing,
And threatens these our towers with . . . God avert it !
 Eteoc. Should the Gods give them what they plan
 'gainst us,
Then they, with those their godless boastings high,
Would perish shamefully and utterly.
And for this man of Arcady thou tell'st of,
We have a man who boasts not, but his hand
Sees the right thing to do ;—Actôr, of him 550
I named but now the brother,—who no tongue
Divorced from deeds will ever let within
Our gates, to spread and multiply our ills,
Nor him who bears upon his foeman's shield
The image of the hateful venom'd beast ;
But she without shall blame him as he tries

¹ The name, as we are told in v. 542, is Parthenopæos, the maiden-faced.

² The Sphinx, besides its general character as an emblem of terror, had, of course, a special meaning as directed to the Thebans. The warrior who bore it threatened to renew the old days when the monster whom Œdipus had overcome had laid waste their city.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

To take her in, when she beneath our walls
Gets sorely bruised and battered.¹ And herein,
If the Gods will, I prophet true shall prove.

STROPHE III

Chor. Thy words thrill through my breast ;
My hair stands all on end,
To hear the boastings great
Of those who speak great things 56a
Unholy. May the Gods
Destroy them in our land !

Mess. A sixth I tell of, one of noblest mood,
Amphiaraos, seer and warrior famed ;
He, stationed at the Homolôian gates,
Reproves the mighty Tydeus with sharp words
As 'murderer,' and 'troubler of the State,'²
'To Argos teacher of all direst ills,
Erinnys' sumpnour,'³ 'murder's minister,' 57c
Whose counsels led Adrastus to these ills.
*And at thy brother Polyneikes glancing
With eyes uplifted for his father's fate,
And ending, twice he syllabled his name,⁴
And called him, and thus speaketh with his lips :—

¹ Sc., the Sphinx on his shield will not be allowed to enter the city. It will only serve as a mark, attracting men to attack both it and the warrior who bears it.

² The quarrel between Tydeus and the seer Amphiaraos had been already touched upon.

⁴ Sc., so pronounced his name as to emphasise the significance of its two component parts, as indicating that he who bore it was a man of much contention.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

"A goodly deed, and pleasant to the Gods,
 Noble for after age to hear and tell,
 Thy father's city and thy country's Gods
 To waste through might of mercenary host!
 And how shall Justice stay thy mother's tears?¹ 580
 And how, when conquered, shall thy fatherland,
 Laid waste, become a true ally to thee?
 As for myself, I shall that land make rich,²
 A prophet buried in a foeman's soil:
 To arms! I look for no inglorious death."
 So spake the prophet, bearing full-orbed shield
 Wrought all of bronze, no ensign on that orb.
 He wishes to be just, and not to seem,³
 Reaping full harvest from his soul's deep furrows,
 Whence ever new and noble counsels spring. 590
 I bid thee send defenders wise and brave.
 Against him. Dread is he who fears the Gods.
Eteoc. Fie on the chance that brings the righteous man
 Close-mated with the ungodly! In all deeds

¹ The words are obscure, but seem to refer to the badge of Polyneikes, the figure of Justice described in v. 643 as on his shield. How shall that Justice, the seer asks, console Jocasta for her son's death? Another rendering gives,

"And how shall Justice quench a mother's life?"
 the "mother" being the country against which Polyneikes wars.

² The words had a twofold fulfilment (1) in the burial of Amphiaraos, in the Theban soil, and (2) in the honour which accrued to Thebes after his death, through the fame of the oracle at his shrine.

³ The passage cannot be passed over without noticing the old tradition (Plutarch, Aristeid. c. 3), that when the actor uttered these words, he and the whole audience looked to Aristides, surnamed the Just, as recognising that the words were true of him as they were of no one else. "Best," instead of "just," is, however, a very old various reading.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Nought is there worse than evil fellowship,
 A crop men should not reap. Death still is found
 The harvest of the field of frenzied pride ;
 For either hath the godly man embarked
 With sailors hot in insolence and guile,¹
 And perished with the race the Gods did loathe ; 600
 Or just himself, with citizens who wrong
 The stranger and are heedless of the Gods,
 Falling most justly in the self-same snare,
 By God's scourge smitten, shares the common doom.
 And thus this seer I speak of, Œcleus' son,
 Righteous, and wise, and good, and reverent,
 A mighty prophet, mingling with the godless
 *And men full bold of speech in reason's spite,
 Who take long march to reach a far-off city,²
 If Zeus so will, shall be hurled down with them. 610
 And he, I trow, shall not draw nigh the gates,
 Not through faint-heart or any vice of mood,
 But well he knows this war shall bring his death,
 If any fruit is found in Loxias' words ;
 And He or holds his speech or speaks in season.
 Yet against him the hero Lasthenes,
 A foe of strangers, at the gates we'll set ;
 Old in his mind, his body in its prime,
 His eye swift-footed, and his hand not slow
 To grasp the spear from 'neath the shield laid bare :³ 620
 Yet 'tis by God's gift men must win success.

1 If the former reference to Aristeides be admitted, we can scarcely avoid seeing in this passage an allusion to Themistocles, as one with whose reckless and democratic policy it was dangerous for the more conservative leader to associate himself.

2 The far-off city, not of Thebes, but of Hades. In the legend of Thebes, the earth opened and swallowed up Amphiarao's, as in 583.

3 The short spear was usually carried under the shelter of the shield ; when brought into action it was, of course, laid bare.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

ANTISTROPHE III

Chor. Hear, O ye Gods! our prayers,
Our just entreaties grant,
That so our State be blest.
Turn ye the toils of war
Upon the invading host.
Outside the walls may Zeus
With thunder smite them low!

Mess. The seventh chief then who at the seventh gate stands,

Thine own, own brother, I will speak of now,
What curses on our State he pours, and prays 630
That he the towers ascending, and proclaimed
By herald's voice to all the territory,
And shouting out the captor's pæan-cry,
May so fight with thee, slay, and with thee die;
Or driving thee alive, who did'st him wrong,
May on thee a vengeance wreak like in kind.
So clamours he, and bids his father's Gods,
His country's guardians, look upon his prayers,
[And grant them all. So Polyneikes prays.]
And he a new and well-wrought shield doth bear,
And twofold sign upon it riveted; 640
For there a woman with a stately tread
Leads one who seems a warrior wrought in gold:
Justice she calls herself, and thus she speaks:

"I WILL BRING BACK THIS MAN, AND HE SHALL HAVE THE CITY AND HIS FATHER'S DWELLING-PLACE."

Such are the signs and mottoes of those men;
And thou, know well whom thou dost mean to send:
So thou shalt never blame my heraldings;
And thou thyself know how to steer the State.

Eteoc. O frenzy-stricken, hated sore of Gods! 650
O woe-fraught race (my race!) of Ædipus!
Ah me! my father's curse is now fulfilled;

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

But neither is it meet to weep or wail,
Lest cry more grievous on the issue come.
Of Polyneikes, name and omen true,
We soon shall know what way his badge shall end,
Whether his gold-wrought letters shall restore him,
His shield's great swelling words with frenzied soul.
An if great Justice, Zeus's virgin child,
Ruled o'er his words and acts, this might have been ; 660
But neither when he left his mother's womb,
Nor in his youth, nor yet in ripening age,
Nor when his beard was gathered on his chin,
Did Justice count him meet for fellowship ;
Nor do I think that she befriends him now
In this great outrage on his father's land.
Yea, justly Justice would as falsely named
Be known, if she with one all-daring joined.
In this I trust, and I myself will face him :
Who else could claim a greater right than I ? 670
Brother with brother fighting, king with king,
And foe with foe, I'll stand. Come, quickly fetch
My greaves that guard against the spear and stones.

Chor. Nay, dearest friend, thou son of Œdipus,
Be ye not like to him with that ill name.
It is enough Cadmeian men should fight
Against the Argives. That blood may be cleansed ;
But death so murderous of two brothers born,
This is pollution that will ne'er wax old.

Eteoc. If a man must bear evil, let him still 680
Be without shame—sole profit that in death.
[No glory comes of base and evil deeds].

Chor. What dost thou crave, my son ? Let no ill fate,
Frenzied and hot for war,
Carry thee headlong on ;
Check the first onset of an evil lust.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Eteoc. Since God so hotly urges on the matter,
Let all of Laios' race whom Phœbos hates,
Drift with the breeze upon Cokytos' wave.

Chor. An over-fierce and passionate desire Stirs thee and pricks thee on
To work an evil deed
Of guilt of blood thy hand should never shed. 690

Eteoc. Nay, my dear father's curse, in full-grown hate,
Dwells on dry eyes that cannot shed a tear,
And speaks of gain before the after-doom.

Chor. But be not thou urged on. The coward's name
Shall not be thine, for thou
Hast ordered well thy life.
Dark-robed Erinnys enters not the house,
When at men's hands the Gods
Accept their sacrifice.

Eteoc. As for the Gods, they scorned us long ago,
And smile but on the offering of our deaths; 700
What boots it then on death's doom still to fawn?

Chor. Nay do it now, while yet 'tis in thy power;¹
Perchance may fortune shift
With tardy change of mood,
And come with spirit less implacable:
At present fierce and hot
She waxeth in her rage.

Eteoc. Yea, fierce and hot the Curse of Œdipus;
And all too true the visions of the night,
My father's treasured store distributing.

Chor. Yield to us women, though thou lov'st us not.

Eteoc. Speak then what may be done, and be not long. 710

Chor. Tread not the path that to the seventh gate leads.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Eteoc. Thou shalt not blunt my sharpened edge with words.

Chor. And yet God loves the victory that submits.¹

Eteoc. That word a warrior must not tolerate.

Chor. Dost thou then haste thy brother's blood to shed?

Eteoc. If the Gods grant it, he shall not 'scape harm.

[Exeunt ETEOCLES, Scout, and Captains

STROPHE I

Chor. I fear her might who doth this whole house wreck,

The Goddess unlike Gods,
The prophetess of evil all too true,
The Erinnyes of thy father's imprecations, 720
Lest she fulfil the curse,
O'er-wrathful, frenzy-fraught,
The curse of Ædipus,
Laying his children low.
This Strife doth urge them on.

ANTISTROPHE I

And now a stranger doth divide the lots,
The Chalyb,² from the Skythians emigrant,
The stern distributor of heaped-up wealth,
The iron that hath assigned them just so much

¹ The Chorus means that if Eteocles would allow himself to be overcome in this contest of his wishes with their prayers the Gods would honour that defeat as if it were indeed a victory. He makes answer that the very thought of being overcome implied in the word "defeat" in anything is one which the true warrior cannot bear.

² The "Chalyb stranger" is the sword, thought of as taking its name from the Skythian tribe of the Chalybes, between Colchis and Armenia, and passing through the Thracians into Greece.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Of land as theirs, no more,
As may suffice for them
As grave when they shall fall,
Without or part or lot
In the broad-spreading plains.

STROPHE II

And when the hands of each
The other's blood have shed,
And the earth's dust shall drink
The black and clotted gore,
Who then can purify?
Who cleanse thee from the guilt?
Ah me! O sorrows new,
That mingle with the old woes of our house!

ANTISTROPHE II

I tell the ancient tale
Of sin that brought swift doom;
Till the third age it waits,
Since Laïos, heeding not
Apollo's oracle,
(Though spoken thrice to him
In Pythia's central shrine,)
That dying childless, he should save the State.

STROPHE III

But he by those he loved full rashly swayed,
Doom for himself begat,
His murderer Œdipus,
Who dared to sow in field
Unholy, whence he sprang,
A root of blood-flecked woe.
Madness together brought Bridegroom and bride accursed.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

ANTISTROPHE III

And now the sea of evil pours its flood :

This falling, others rise,

As with a triple crest,

Which round the State's stern roars :

And but a bulwark slight,

A tower's poor breadth, defends :

And lest the city fall

With its two kings I fear.

769

STROPHE IV

*And that atonement of the ancient curse

Receives fulfilment now ; ¹

*And when they come, the evils pass not by.

E'en so the wealth of sea-adventurers,

When heaped up in excess,

Leads but to cargo from the stern thrown out.²

ANTISTROPHE IV

For whom of mortals did the Gods so praise,

And fellow-worshippers,

770

*And race of those who feed their flocks and herds ³

As much as then they honoured Œdipus,

Who from our country's bounds

Had driven the monster, murderess of men ?

¹ The two brothers, i.e., are set at one again, but it is not in the bonds of friendship, but in those of death.

² The image meets us again in Agam. 980. Here the thought is, that a man too prosperous is like a ship too heavily freighted. He must part with a portion of his possession in order to save the rest. Not to part with them leads, when the storm rages, to an enforced abandonment and utter loss.

³ Another reading gives—

"And race of those who crowd the Agora."

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

STROPHE V

And when too late he knew,
Ah, miserable man ! his wedlock dire,
Vexed sore with that dread shame,
With heart to madness driven,
He wrought a two-fold ill,
And with the hand that smote his father's life 790
*Blinded the eyes that might his sons have seen.

ANTISTROPHE V

And with a mind provoked
By nurture scant, he at his sons did hurl¹
His curses dire and dark,
(Ah, bitter curses those !)
That they with spear in hand
Should one day share their father's wealth ; and I Fear now lest swift Erinnyes should fulfil them.

*Enter Messenger

Mess. Be of good cheer, ye maidens, mother-reared ;
Our city has escaped the yoke of bondage, 790
The boasts of mighty men are fallen low,
And this our city in calm waters floats,
And, though by waves lashed, springs not any leak.
Our fortress still holds out, and we did guard
The gates with champions who redeemed their pledge.
In the six gateways almost all goes well ;
But the seventh gate did King Apollo choose,²

¹ This seems to have been one form of the legends as to the cause of the curse which Œdipus had launched upon his sons, An alternative rendering is—

And with a mind enraged
At thought of what they were whom he had reared,
He at his sons did hurl
His curses dire and dark.

² Sc., when Eteocles fell, Apollo took his place at the seventh gate, and turned the tide of war in favour of the Thebans.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Seventh mighty chief, avenging Laïos' want
Of counsel on the sons of Œdipus.

Chor. What new disaster happens to our city? ¹ 800

Mess. The city's saved, but both the royal brothers, . . .

Chor. Who? and what of them? I'm distraught with fear.

Mess. Be calm, and hear: the sons of Œdipus, . . .

Chor. Oh wretched me! a prophet I of ill!

Mess. Slain by each other, earth has drunk their blood.

Chor. Came they to that? 'Tis dire; yet tell it me.

Mess. Too true, by brother's hand our chiefs are slain.

Chor. What, did the brother's hands the brother lay?

Mess. No doubt is there that they are laid in dust.

Chor. Thus was there then a common fate for both?

Mess. *Yea, it lays low the whole ill-fated race.

Chor. These things give cause for gladness and for tears, 810

Seeing that our city prospers, and our lords,
The generals twain, with well-wrought Skythian steel,
Have shared between them all their store of goods,
And now shall have their portion in a grave,
Borne on, as spake their father's grievous curse.²

Mess. [The city's saved, but of the brother-kings
The earth has drunk the blood, each slain by each.]

Chor. Great Zeus! and ye, O Gods!

Guardians of this our town,

Who save in very deed

The towers of Cadmos old, 820

² There seems an intentional ambiguity. They are "borne on," but it is as the corpses of the dead are borne to the sepulchre.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Shall I rejoice and shout
Over the happy chance
That frees our State from harm ;
Or weep that ill-starred pair,
The war-chiefs, childless and most miserable,
Who, true to that ill name
Of Polyneikes, died in impious mood,
Contending overmuch ?

STROPHE

Oh dark, and all too true
That curse of Œdipus and all his race,¹
An evil chill is falling on my heart,
And, like a Thyiad wild,
Over his grave I sing a dirge of grief,
Hearing the dead have died by evil fate,
Each in foul bloodshed steeped ;
Ah me ! Ill-omened is the spear's accord.²

880

ANTISTROPHE

It hath wrought out its end,
And hath not failed, that prayer the father poured ;
And Laios' reckless counsels work till now :
I fear me for the State ;
The oracles have not yet lost their edge ;
O men of many sorrows, ye have wrought
This deed incredible ;

840

¹ Not here the curse uttered by Œdipus, but that which rested on him and all his kin. There is possibly an allusion to the curse which Pelops is said to have uttered against Laios when he stole his son Chrysippos. Comp. v. 837.

² As in v. 763 we read of the brothers as made one in death, so now of the concord which is wrought out by conflict, the concord, i.e., of the grave.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Not now in word come woes most lamentable.

[As the Chorus are speaking, the bodies of ETEOCLES and POLYNEIKES are brought in solemn procession by Theban Citizens

EPODE

Yea, it is all too clear,
The herald's tale of woe comes full in sight ;
Twofold our cares, twin evils born of pride,
Murderous, with double doom,
Wrought unto full completeness all these ills.
What shall I say ? What else
Are they than woes that make this house their home ?
But oh ! my friends, ply, ply with swift, strong gale,
That even stroke of hands upon your head,¹
In funeral order, such as evermore

O'er Acheron sends on
*That bark of State, dark-rigged, accursed its voyage,
Which nor Apollo visits nor the sun,²
On to the shore unseen,
The resting-place of all.

[ISMENE and ANTIGONE are seen approaching in mourning garments, followed by a procession of women wailing and lamenting
For see, they come to bitter deed called forth,
Ismene and the maid Antigone,
To wail their brothers' fall ;
With little doubt I deem,

¹ The Chorus are called on to change their character, and to pass from the attitude of suppliants, with outstretched arms, to that of mourners at a funeral, beating on their breasts. But, perhaps, the call is addressed to the mourners who are seen approaching with Ismene and Antigone.

² The thought is drawn from the theoris or pilgrim-ship, which went with snow-white sails, and accompanied by joyful pæans, on a solemn mission from Athens to Delos. In contrast

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

That they will pour from fond, deep-bosomed breasts
A worthy strain of grief:
But it is meet that we,
Before we hear their cry, . 860
Should utter the harsh hymn Erinny's loves,
And sing to Hades dark
The Pæan of distress.
O ye, most evil-fated in your kin,
Of all who guard their robes with maiden's band,
I weep and wail, and feigning know I none,
That I should fail to speak
My sorrow from my heart.

STROPHE I

Semi-Chor. A. Alas! alas!
Men of stern mood, who would not list to friends,
Unwearied in all ills, 870
Seizing your father's house, O wretched ones
With the spear's murderous point.
Semi-Chor. B. Yea, wretched they who found a wretched doom,
With havoc of the house.

ANTISTROPHE I

Semi-Chor. A. Alas! alas!
Ye who laid low the ancient walls of home,
On sovereignty, ill won,
Your eyes have looked, and ye at last are brought To concord by the sword.

with this type of joy, Æschylos draws the picture of the boat of Charon, which passes over the gloomy pool accompanied by the sighs and gestures of bitter lamentation. So, in the old Attic legend, the ship that annually carried seven youths and maidens to the Minotaur of Crete was conspicuous for its black sails.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Semi-Chor. B. Yea, of a truth, the curse of Ædipus ⁸⁸⁰
Erinnys dread fulfils.

STROPHE II

Semi-Chor. A. Yea, smitten through the heart, Smitten through sides where flowed the blood of brothers.

Ah me! ye doomed of God!

Ah me! the curses dire

Of deaths ye met with each at other's hands!

Semi-Chor. B. Thou tell'st of men death-smitten through and through,

Both in their homes and lives,

With wrath beyond all speech, ⁸⁹⁰

And doom of discord fell,

That sprang from out the curse their father spake.

ANTISTROPHE II

Semi-Chor. A. Yea, through the city runs
A wailing cry. The high towers wail aloud;
Wails all the plain that loves her heroes well;

And to their children's sons

The wealth will go for which

The strife of those ill-starred ones brought forth death.

Semi-Chor. B. Quick to resent, they shared their fortune so,

That each like portion won;

*Nor can their friends regard

Their umpire without blame; ⁹⁰⁰

Nor is our voice in thanks to Ares raised.

STROPHE III

Semi-Chor. A. By the sword smitten low,

Thus are they now;

By the sword smitten low,

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

There wait them . . . Nay,
Doth one perchance ask what ?
Shares in their old ancestral sepulchres.

Semi-Chor. B. *The sorrow of the house is borne to them
By my heart-rending wail.
Mine own the cries I pour ;
Mine own the woes I weep,
Bitter and joyless, shedding truest tears 910
From heart that faileth, even as they fall,
For these two kingly chiefs.

ANTISTROPHE III

Semi-Chor. A. Yes ; one may say of them,
That wretched pair,
That they much ill have wrought
To their own host ;
Yea, and, to alien ranks
Of many nations fallen in the fray.
Semi-Chor. B. Ah ! miserable she who bare those twain,
'Bove all of women born
Who boast a mother's name ! 920
Taking her son, her own,
As spouse, she bare these children, and they both,
By mutual slaughter and by brothers' hands,
Have found their end in death.

STROPHE IV

Semi-Chor. A. Yes ; of the same womb born, and doomed both,
*Not as friends part, they fell,
In strife to madness pushed
In this their quarrel's end.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Semi-Chor. B. The quarrel now is hushed,
And in the ensanguined earth their lives are blent ; 937
Full near in blood are they.
Stern umpire of their strifes
Has been the stranger from beyond the sea,¹
Fresh from the furnace, keen and sharpened steel.
Stern, too, is Ares found,
Distributing their goods,
Making their father's curses all too true.

ANTISTROPHE IV

Semi-Chor. A. At last they have their share, ah, wretched ones !
Of burdens sent from God. 940
And now beneath them lies
A boundless wealth of——earth.
Semi-Chor. B. O ye who your own race
Have made to burgeon out with many woes !
Over the end at last
The brood of Curses raise
Their shrill, sharp cry of lamentation loud,
The race being put to flight of utmost rout,
And Atè's trophy stands,
Where in the gates they fell ;
And Fate, now both are conquered, rests at last. 950

*Enter ANTIGONE and ISMENE, followed by mourning maidens*²

Ant. Thou wast smitten, and thou smotest.
Ism. Thou did'st slaughter, and wast slaughtered.

¹ The "Chalyb," or iron sword, which the Hellenes had imported from the Skythians. Comp. vv. 70. 86.

² The lyrical, operative character of Greek tragedies has to be borne in mind as we read passages like that which follows. They

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Ant. Thou with spear to death did'st smite him.

Ism. Thou with spear to death wast smitten.

Ant. Oh, the woe of all your labours!

Ism. Oh, the woe of all ye suffered!

Ant. Pour the cry of lamentation.

Ism. Pour the tears of bitter weeping.

Ant. There in death thou liest prostrate.

Ism. Having wrought a great destruction.

STROPHE

Ant. Ah! my mind is crazed with wailing.

Ism. Yea, my heart within me groaneth.

Ant. Thou for whom the city weepeth!

Ism. Thou too, doomed to all ill-fortune!

Ant. By a loved hand thou hast perished.

Ism. And a loved form thou hast slaughtered.

Ant. Double woes are ours to tell of.

Ism. Double woes too ours to look on.

Ant. *Twofold sorrows from near kindred.

Ism. *Sisters we by brothers standing.

Ant. Terrible are they to tell of.

Ism. Terrible are they to look on.

Chor. Ah me, thou Destiny,
Giver of evil gifts, and working woe, were not meant to be read. Uttered in a passionate recitative, accompanied by expressive action, they probably formed a very effective element in the actual representation of the tragedy. We may look on it as the only extant specimen of the kind of wailing which was characteristic of Eastern burials, and which was slowly passing away in Greece under the influence of a higher culture. The early fondness of Æschylos for a finale of this nature is seen also in The Persians, and in a more solemn and subdued form, in the Eumenides. The feeling that there was something barbaric in these untoward displays of grief, showed itself alike in the legislation of Solon, and the eloquence of Pericles.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

And thou dread spectral form of Œdipus,
And swarth Erinnyes too,
A mighty one art thou.

ANTISTROPHE

Ant. Ah me! ah me! woes dread to look on .

Ism. Ye showed to me, returned from exile.

Ant. Not, when he had slain, returned he.

Ism. Nay, he, saved from exile, perished.

Ant. Yea, I trow too well, he perished.

Ism. And his brother, too, he murdered.

Ant. Woeful, piteous, are those brothers!

Ism. Woeful, piteous, all they suffered!

Ant. Woes of kindred wrath enkindling!

Ism. Saturate with threefold horrors!

Ant. Terrible are they to tell of.

Ism. Terrible are they to look on.

Chor. Ah me, thou Destiny,
Giver of evil gifts, and stern of soul,
And thou dread spectral form of Œdipus,
And swarth Erinnyes too,
A mighty one art thou.

EPODE

Ant. Thou, then, by full trial knowest . . .

Ism. Thou, too, no whit later learning. . . .

Ant. When thou cam'st back to this city.¹ . .

Ism. Rival to our chief in warfare.

Ant. Woe, alas! for all our troubles!

Ism. Woe, alas! for all our evils!

Ant. Evils fallen on our houses!

¹ Here, and perhaps throughout, we must think of Antigone as addressing and looking on the corpse of Polyneikes, Ismene on that of Eteocles.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Ism. Evils fallen on our country !

Ant. And on me before all others. . . .

Ism. And to me the future waiting. . . . 1000

Ant. Woe for those two brothers luckless !

Ism. King Eteocles, our leader !

Ant. Oh, before all others wretched ! .

Ism.

Ant. Ah, by Atè frenzy-stricken !

Ism. Ah, where now shall they be buried ?

Ant. There where grave is highest honour.

Ism. Ah, the woe my father wedded !

Enter a Herald

Her. 'Tis mine the judgment and decrees to publish

Of this Cadmeian city's counsellors :

It is decreed Eteocles to honour,

For his goodwill towards this land of ours, 1010

With seemly burial, such as friend may claim ;

For warding off our foes he courted death ;

Pure as regards his country's holy things,

Blameless he died where death the young beseems ;

This then I'm ordered to proclaim of him.

But for his brother's, Polyneikes' corpse,

To cast it out unburied, prey for dogs,

As working havoc on Cadmeian land,

Unless some God had hindered by the spear

Of this our prince ;¹ and he, though, dead, shall gain 1020

The curse of all his father's Gods, whom he

[Pointing to POLYNEIKES

With alien host dishonouring, sought to take

Our city. Him by ravenous birds interred

¹ Perhaps

" Unless some God had stood against the spear

* This chief did wield."

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Ingloriously, they sentence to receive
His full deserts ; and none may take in hand
To heap up there a tomb, nor honour him
With shrill-voiced wailings ; but he still must lie,
Without the meed of burial by his friends.
So do the high Cadmeian powers decree.

Ant. And I those rulers of Cadmeians tell,¹ 1080
That if no other care to bury him,
I will inter him, facing all the risk,
Burying my brother : nor am I ashamed
To thwart the State in rank disloyalty ;
Strange power there is in ties of blood, that we,
Born of woe-laden mother, sire ill-starred,
Are bound by : therefore of thy full free-will,
Share thou, my soul, in woes he did not will,
Thou living, he being dead, with sister's heart.
And this I say, no wolves with ravening maw,
Shall tear his flesh—No ! no ! let none think that !
For tomb and burial I will scheme for him, 1090
Though I be but weak woman, bringing earth
Within my byssine raiment's fold, and so
Myself will bury him ; let no man think
(I say't again) aught else. Take heart, my soul !
There shall not fail the means effectual.

Her. I bid thee not defy the State in this.

Ant. I bid thee not proclaim vain words to me.

Her. Stern is the people now, with victory flushed.

Ant. Stern let them be, he shall not tombless lie.

Her. And wilt thou honour whom the State doth loathe ?

¹ The speech of the Antigone becomes the starting-point, in the hands of Sophocles, of the noblest of his tragedies. The denial of burial, it will be remembered, was looked on as not merely an indignity and outrage against the feelings of the living, but as depriving the souls of the dead of all rest and peace. As such it was the punishment of parricides and traitors.

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

Ant. *Yea, from the Gods he gets an honour due.¹ 1080

Her. It was not so till he this land attacked.

Ant. He, suffering evil, evil would repay.

Her. Not against one his arms were turned, but all.

Ant. Strife is the last of Gods to end disputes :
Him I will bury ; talk no more of it.

Her. Choose for thyself then, I forbid the deed.

Chor. Alas ! alas ! alas !

Ye haughty boasters, race-destroying,
Now Fates and now Erinnyes, smiting
The sons of Œdipus, ye slew them,
With a root-and-branch destruction. 1090

What shall I then do, what suffer ?

What shall I devise in counsel ?

How should I dare nor to weep thee,

Nor escort thee to the burial ?

But I tremble and I shrink from

All the terrors which they threatened,

They who are my fellow-townsmen.

Many mourners thou (looking to the bier of ETEOCLES) shalt meet with ;

But he, lost one, unlamented,

With his sister's wailing only

Passeth. Who with this complieth ?

Semi-Chor. A. Let the city doom or not doom

Those who weep for Polyneikes ;

¹ The words are obscure enough, the point lying, it may be, in their ambiguity. Antigone here, as in the tragedy of Sophocles, pleads that the Gods have pardoned ; they still command and love the reverence for the dead, which she is about to show. The herald catches up her words and takes them in another sense, as though all the honour he had met with from the Gods had been defeat, and death, and shame, as the reward of his sacrilege. Another rendering, however, gives—

"Yes, so the Gods have done with honouring him."

THE SEVEN AGAINST THEBES

We will go, and we will bury, 1070
Maidens we in sad procession ;
For the woe to all is common,
And our State with voice uncertain,
Of the claims of Right and Justice ;
Hither, thither, shifts its praises.

Semi-Chor. B. We will thus, our chief attending,
Speak, as speaks the State, our praises :
Of the claims of Right and Justice ;¹
For next those the Blessed Rulers,
And the strength of Zeus, he chiefly
Saved the city of Cadmeians
From the doom of fell destruction,
From the doom of whelming utter,
In the flood of alien warriors.

[Exeunt ANTIGONE and Semi-Chorus A., following the corpse of POLYNEIKES ; ISMENE and Semi-Chorus B. that of ETROCLES.]

¹ The words are probably a protest against the changeableness of the Athenian demos, as seen especially in their treatment of Aristeides.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

• PROMETHEUS	HERMES
OKEANOS	STRENGTH
HEPHÆSTOS	FORCE

Chorus of Ocean Nymphs

ARGUMENT.—In the old time, when Cronos was sovereign of the Gods, Zeus, whom he had begotten, rose up against him, and the Gods were divided in their counsels, some, the Titans chiefly, siding with the father, and some with the son. And Prometheus, the son of Earth or Themis, though one of the Titans, supported Zeus, as did also Okeanos, and by his counsels Zeus obtained the victory, and Cronos was chained in Tartaros, and the Titans buried under mountains, or kept in bonds in Hades. And then Prometheus, seeing the miseries of the race of men, of whom Zeus took little heed, stole the fire which till then had belonged to none but Hephæstos and was used only for the Gods, and gave it to mankind, and taught them many arts whereby their wretchedness was lessened. But Zeus being wroth with Prometheus for this deed, sent Hephæstos, with his two helpers, Strength and Force, to fetter him to a rock on Caucasos.

And in yet another story was the cruelty of the Gods made known. For Zeus loved Io, the daughter of Inachos, king of Argos, and she was haunted by visions of the night, telling her of his passion, and she told her father thereof. And Inachos, sending to the God at Delphi, was told to drive Io forth from her home. And Zeus gave her the horns of a cow, and Hera, who hated her because she was dear to Zeus, sent with her a gadfly that stung her, and gave her no rest, and drove her over many lands.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

Note.—The play is believed to have been the second of a Trilogy, of which the first was Prometheus the Fire-giver, and the third Prometheus Unbound.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

SCENE.—SKYTHIA, on the heights of Caucasos. The Euxine seen in the distance

Enter HEPHÆSTOS, STRENGTH, and FORCE, leading PROMETHEUS in chains¹

Strength. Lo! to a plain, earth's boundary remote,
We now are come,—the tract as Skythian known,
A desert inaccessible: and now,
Hephæstos, it is thine to do the hests
The Father gave thee, to these lofty crags
To bind this crafty trickster fast in chains
Of adamantine bonds that none can break;
For he thy choice flower stealing, the bright glory
Of fire that all arts spring from, hath bestowed it
On mortal men. And so for fault like this
He now must pay the Gods due penalty,
That he may learn to bear the sovereign rule
Of Zeus, and cease from his philanthropy.

Heph. O Strength, and thou, O Force, the hest of Zeus,

¹ The scene seems at first an exception to the early conventional rule, which forbade the introduction of a third actor on the Greek stage. But it has been noticed that (1) Force does not speak, and (2) Prometheus does not speak till Strength and Force have retired, and that it is therefore probable that the whole work of nailing is done on a lay figure or effigy of some kind, and that one of the two who had before taken part in the dialogue then speaks behind it in the character of Prometheus. So the same actor must have appeared in succession as Okeanos, Io, and Hermes.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

As far as touches you, attains its end,
And nothing hinders. Yet my courage fails
To bind a God of mine own kin by force
To this bare rock where tempests wildly sweep ;
And yet I needs must muster courage for it :
'Tis no slight thing the Father's words to scorn.
O thou of Themis [to PROMETHEUS] wise in counsel son,

Full deep of purpose, lo ! against my will,¹
I fetter thee against thy will with bonds^{*}
Of bronze that none can loose, to this lone height, ²⁰
Where thou shalt know nor voice nor face of man,
But scorching in the hot blaze of the sun,
Shalt lose thy skin's fair beauty. Thou shalt long
For starry-mantled night to hide day's sheen,
For sun to melt the rime of early dawn ;
And evermore the weight of present ill
Shall wear thee down. Unborn as yet is he Who shall release thee : this the fate thou gain'st
As due reward for thy philanthropy.
For thou, a God not fearing wrath of Gods,
In thy transgression gav'st their power to men ; ³⁰
And therefore on this rock of little ease
Thou still shalt keep thy watch, nor lying down,
Nor knowing sleep, nor ever bending knee ;
And many groans and wailings profitless
Thy lips shall utter ; for the mind of Zeus

¹ Prometheus (Forethought) is the son of Themis (Right) the second occupant of the Pythian Oracle (Eumen. v. 2). His sympathy with man leads him to impart the gift which raised them out of savage animal life, and for this Zeus, who appears throughout the play as a hard taskmaster, sentences him to fetters. Hephaestus, from whom this fire had been stolen, has a touch of pity for him. Strength, who comes as the servant, not of Hephaestus, but of Zeus himself, acts, as such, with merciless cruelty.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

Remains inexorable. Who holds a power
But newly gained¹ is ever stern of mood.

Strength. Let be ! Why linger in this idle pity ?
Why dost not hate a God to Gods a foe,
Who gave thy choicest prize to mortal men ?

Heph. Strange is the power of kin and intercourse.²

Strength. I own it ; yet to slight the³ Father's words, 40

How may that be ? Is not that fear the worse ?

Heph. Still art thou ruthless, full of savagery.

Strength. There is no help in weeping over him :
Spend not thy toil on things that profit not.

Heph. O handicraft to me intolerable !

Strength. Why loath'st thou it ? Of these thy present griefs

That craft of thine is not one whit the cause.

Heph. And yet I would some other had that skill.

Strength. *All things bring toil except for Gods to reign ;³

For none but Zeus can boast of freedom true. 50

Heph. Too well I see the proof, and gainsay not.

Strength. Wilt thou not speed to fix the chains on him,

Lest He, the Father, see thee loitering here ?

Heph. Well, here the handcuffs thou may'st see prepared.

Strength. In thine hands take him. Then with all thy might

Strike with thine hammer ; nail him to the rocks.

Heph. The work goes on, I ween, and not in vain.

¹ The generalised statement refers to Zeus, as having but recently expelled Cronos from his throne in Heaven.

² Hephaestus, as the great fire-worker, had taught Prometheus to use the fire which he afterwards bestowed on men.

³ Perhaps, " All might is ours except o'er Gods to rule."

PROMETHEUS BOUND

Strength. Strike harder, rivet, give no whit of ease :
A wondrous knack has he to find resource,
Even where all might seem to baffle him.

Heph. Lo ! this his arm is fixed inextricably. 60

Strength. Now rivet thou this other fast, that he May learn, though sharp, that he than Zeus is duller.

Heph. No one but he could justly blame my work.

Strength. Now drive the stern jaw of the adamant wedge

Right through his chest with all the strength thou hast.

Heph. Ah me ! Prometheus, for thy woes I groan.

Strength. Again, thou'rt loth, and for the foes of Zeus
Thou groanest : take good heed to it lest thou
Ere long with cause thyself commiserate.

Heph. Thou see'st a sight unsightly to our eyes.

Strength. I see this man obtaining his deserts : 70
Nay, cast thy breast-chains round about his ribs.

Heph. I must needs do it. Spare thine o'er much bidding ;

Go thou below and rivet both his legs.¹

Strength. Nay, I will bid thee, urge thee to thy work.

Heph. There, it is done, and that with no long toil.

Strength. Now with thy full power fix the galling fettters :

Thou hast a stern o'erlooker of thy work.

Heph. Thy tongue but utters words that match thy form.²

Strength. Choose thou the melting mood ; but chide not me *

For my self-will and wrath and ruthlessness. 80

¹ The words indicate that the effigy of Prometheus, now nailed to the rock, was, as being that of a Titan, of colossal size,

² The touch is characteristic as showing that here, as in the Eumenides, Æschylos relied on the horribleness of the masks, as part of the machinery of his plays.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

Heph. Now let us go, his limbs are bound in chains.

Strength. Here then wax proud, and stealing what belongs

To the Gods, to mortals give it. What can they Avail to rescue thee from these thy woes?
Falsely the Gods have given thee thy name,
Prometheus, Forethought; forethought thou dost need

To free thyself from this rare handiwork.

• [Exeunt HEPHÆSTOS, STRENGTH, and FORCE, leaving PROMETHEUS on the rock

*Prom.*¹ Thou firmament of God, and swift-winged winds,

Ye springs of rivers, and of ocean waves

That smile innumerable! Mother of us all,

90

O Earth, and Sun's all-seeing eye, behold,

I pray, what I a God from Gods endure.

Behold in what foul case

I for ten⁰ thousand years

Shall struggle in my woe,

In these unseemly chains.

Such doom the new-made Monarch of the Blest

Hath now devised for me.

Woe, woe! The present and the oncoming pang

I wail, as I search out

The place and hour when end of all these ills

Shall dawn on me at last.

100

What say I? All too clearly I foresee

The things that come, and nought of pain shall be

¹ The silence of Prometheus up to this point was partly, as has been said, consequent on the conventional laws of the Greek drama, but it is also a touch of supreme insight into the heroic temper. In the presence of his torturers, the Titan will not utter even a groan. When they are gone, he appeals to the sympathy of Nature.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

By me unlooked-for ; but I needs must bear
My destiny as best I may, knowing well
The might resistless of Necessity.
And neither may I speak of this my fate,
Nor hold my peace. For I, poor I, through giving Great gifts to mortal men, am prisoner made
In these fast fetters ; yea, in fennel stalk ¹
I snatched the hidden spring of stolen fire,
Which is to men a teacher of all arts, ¹
Their chief resource. And now this penalty
Of that offence I pay, fast riveted
In chains beneath the open firmament.

Ha ! ha ! What now ?
What sound, what odour floats invisibly ? ²
Is it of God or man, or blending both ?
And has one come to this remotest rock
To look upon my woes ? Or what wills he ?
Behold me bound, a God to evil doomed,
The foe of Zeus, and held
In hatred by all Gods ^{1:}
Who tread the courts of Zeus :
And this for my great love,

¹ The legend is from Hesiod (Theogon., v. 567). The fennel, or narthex, seems to have been a large umbelliferous plant, with a large stem filled with a sort of pith, which was used when dry as timber. Stalks were carried as wands (the thyrsi) by the men and women who joined in Bacchanalian processions. In modern botany, the name is given to the plant which produces Asafoetida, and the stem of which, from its resinous character, would burn freely, and so connect itself with the Promethean myth. On the other hand, the Narthex Asafoetida is found at present only in Persia, Afghanistan, and the Punjab.

² The ocean nymphs, like other divine ones, would be anointed with ambrosial unguents, and the odour would be wafted before them by the rustling of their wings. This too we may think of as part of the "stage effects" of the play.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

Too great, for mortal men.
Ah me! what rustling sounds
Hear I of birds not far?
With the light whirr of wings
The air re-echoeth:
All that draws nigh to me is cause of fear.¹

*Enter Chorus of Ocean Nymphs, with wings, floating in the air*²

Chor. Nay, fear thou nought: in love
All our array of wings
In eager race hath come 130
To this high peak, full hardly gaining o'er
Our Father's mind and will;
And the swift-rushing breezes bore me on:
For lo! the echoing sound of blows on iron
Pierced to our cave's recess, and put to flight
My shamefast modesty,
And I in unshod haste, on winged car,
To thee rushed hitherward.

Prom. Ah me! ah me!
Offspring of Tethys blest with many a child, 140
Daughters of Old Okeanos that rolls
Round all the earth with never-sleeping stream,
Behold ye me, and see
With what chains fettered fast,
I on the topmost crags of this ravine
Shall keep my sentry-post unenviable.

¹ The words are not those of a vague terror only. The sufferer knows that his tormentor is to come to him before long on wings, and therefore the sound as of the flight of birds is full of terrors.

² By the same stage mechanism the Chorus remains in the air till verse 280, when, at the request of Prometheus, they alight.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

Chor. I see it, O Prometheus, and a mist
Of fear and full of tears comes o'er mine eyes,
Thy frame beholding thus,
Writhing on these high rocks
In adamantine ills.

160

New pilots now o'er high Olympos rule,
And with new-fashioned laws
Zeus reigns, down-trampling right,
And all the ancient powers He sweeps away.

Prom. Ah! would that 'neath the Earth, 'neath
Hades too,
Home of the dead, far down to Tartaros
Unfathomable He in fetters fast

165

In wrath had hurled me down :
So neither had a God
Nor any other mocked at these my woes ;
But now, the wretched plaything of the winds,
I suffer ills at which my foes rejoice.

Chor. Nay, which of all the Gods
Is so hard-hearted as to joy in this ?
Who, Zeus excepted, doth not pity thee
In these thine ills ? But He,

Ruthless, with soul unbent,
Subdues the heavenly host, nor will He cease¹
Until his heart be satiate with power,
Or some one seize with subtle stratagem
The sovran might that so resistless seemed.

Prom. Nay, of a truth, though put to evil shame,

¹ Here, as throughout the play, the poet puts into the mouth of his dramatis personæ words which must have seemed to the devouter Athenians sacrilegious enough to call for an indictment before the Areiopagos. But the final play of the Trilogy came, we may believe, as the Eumenides did in its turn, as a reconciliation of the conflicting thoughts that rise in men's minds out of the seeming anomalies of the world.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

In massive fetters bound,
The Ruler of the Gods
Shall yet have need of me, yes, e'en of me,
To tell the counsel new
That seeks to strip from him
His sceptre and his might of sovereignty.
In vain will He with words
Or suasion's honeyed charms
Soothe me, nor will I tell
Through fear of his stern threats,
Ere He shall set me free
From these my bonds, and make,
Of his own choice, amends
For all these outrages.

Chor. Full rash art thou, and yield'st
In not a jot to bitterest form of woe ;
Thou art o'er-free and reckless in thy speech :
But piercing fear hath stirred
My inmost soul to strife ;
For I fear greatly touching thy distress,
As to what haven of these woes of thine
Thou now must steer : the son of Cronos hath
A stubborn mood and heart inexorable.

Prom. I know that Zeus is hard,
And keeps the Right supremely to himself ;
But then, I trow, He'll be Full pliant in his will,
When He is thus crushed down.
Then, calming down his mood
Of hard and bitter wrath,
He'll hasten unto me,
As I to him shall haste,
For friendship and for peace.

Chor. Hide it not from us, tell us all the tale :
For what offence Zeus, having seized thee thus,

PROMETHEUS BOUND

So wantonly and bitterly insults thee :
If the tale hurt thee not, inform thou us.

Prom. Painful are these things to me e'en to speak :
Painful is silence ; everywhere is woe.
For when the high Gods fell on mood of wrath,
And hot debate of mutual strife was stirred,
Some wishing to hurl Cronos from his throne,
That Zeus, forsooth, might reign ; while others strove,
Eager that Zeus might never rule the Gods : 210
Then I, full strongly seeking to persuade
The Titans, yea, the sons of Heaven and Earth,
Failed of my purpose. Scorning subtle arts,
With counsels violent, they thought that they
By force would gain full easy mastery.
But then not once or twice my mother Themis
And Earth, one form though bearing many names,¹
Had prophesied the future, how 'twould run,
That not by strength nor yet by violence, 220
But guile, should those who prospered gain the day.
And when in my words I this counsel gave,
They deigned not e'en to glance at it at all.
And then of all that offered, it seemed best
To join my mother, and of mine own will,
Not against his will, take my side with Zeus,
And by my counsels, mine, the dark deep pit
Of Tartaros the ancient Cronos holds,
Himself and his allies. Thus profiting
By me, the mighty ruler of the Gods 230
Repays me with these evil penalties :
For somehow this disease in sovereignty

¹ The words leave it uncertain whether Themis is identified with Earth, or, as in the Eumenides (v. 2) distinguished from her. The Titans as a class, then, children of Okeanos and Chthon (another name for Land or Earth), are the kindred rather than the brothers of Prometheus.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

Inheres, of never trusting to one's friends.¹
And since ye ask me under what pretence
He thus maltreats me, I will show it you :
For soon as He upon his father's throne
Had sat secure, forthwith to divers Gods
He divers gifts distributed, and his realm
Began to order. But of mortal men
He took no heed, but purposed utterly
To crush their race and plant another new ;
And, I excepted, none dared cross his will ;
But I did dare, and mortal men I freed
From passing on to Hades thunder-stricken ;
And therefore am I bound beneath these woes,
Dreadful to suffer, pitiable to see :
And I, who in my pity thought of men
More than myself, have not been worthy deemed
To gain like favour, but all ruthlessly
I thus am chained, foul shame this sight to Zeus.

240

Chor. Iron-hearted must he be and made of rock
Who is not moved, Prometheus, by thy woes :
Fain could I wish I ne'er had seen such things,
And, seeing them, am wounded to the heart.

Prom. Yea, I am piteous for my friends to see.

Chor. Did'st thou not go to farther lengths than this ?

Prom. I made men cease from contemplating death.²

Chor. What medicine did'st thou find for that disease ?

¹ The generalising words here, as in v. 35, appeal to the Athenian hatred of all that was represented by the words tyrant and tyranny.

² The state described is that of men who "through fear of death are all their lifetime subject to bondage." That state, the parent of all superstition, fostered the slavish awe in which Zeus delighted. Prometheus, representing the active intellect of man, bestows new powers, new interests, new hopes, which at last divert them from that fear.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

Prom. Blind hopes I gave to live and dwell with them.

Chor. Great service that thou did'st for mortal men!

Prom. And more than that, I gave them fire, yes I. ²⁶⁰

Chor. Do short-lived men the flaming fire possess?

Prom. Yea, and full many an art they'll learn from it.

Chor. And is it then on charges such as these

That Zeus maltreats thee, and no respite gives

Of many woes? And has thy pain no end?

Prom. End there is none, except as pleases Him.

Chor. How shall it please? What hope hast thou?
See'st not

That thou hast sinned? Yet to say how thou sinned'st
Gives me no pleasure, and is pain to thee.

Well! let us leave these things, and, if we may,

Seek out some means to 'scape from this thy woe. ²⁷⁰

Prom. 'Tis a light thing for one who has his foot

Beyond the reach of evil to exhort

And counsel him who suffers. This to me

Was all well known. Yea, willing, willingly

I sinned, nor will deny it. Helping men,

I for myself found trouble: yet I thought not

That I with such dread penalties as these

Should wither here on these high-towering crags,

Lighting on this lone hill and neighbourless.

Wherefore wail not for these my present woes,

But, drawing nigh, my coming fortunes hear, ²⁸⁰

That ye may learn the whole tale to the end.

Nay, hearken, hearken; show your sympathy

With him who suffers now. 'Tis thus that woe,

Wandering, now falls on this one, now on that.

Chor. Not to unwilling hearers hast thou uttered,

Prometheus, thy request, -

And now with nimble foot abounding

My swiftly rushing car,

PROMETHEUS BOUND

And the pure æther, path of birds of heaven, 290
I will draw near this rough and rocky land,
For much do I desire
To hear this tale, full measure, of thy woes.

Enter OKEANOS, on a car drawn by a winged gryphon

Okean. Lo, I come to thee, Prometheus,
Reaching goal of distant journey,¹
Guiding this my winged courser
By my will, without a bridle;
And thy sorrows move my pity.
Force, in part, I deem, of kindred
Leads me on, nor know I any, 300
Whom, apart from kin, I honour
More than thee, in fuller measure.
This thou shalt own true and earnest:
I deal not in glozing speeches.
Come then, tell me how to help thee;
Ne'er shalt thou say that one more friendly
Is found than unto thee is Okean.

Prom. Let be. What boots it? Thou then too art come

To gaze upon my sufferings. How did'st dare
Leaving the stream that bears thy name, and caves
Hewn in the living rock, this land to visit,
Mother of iron? What then, art thou come
To gaze upon my fall and offer pity? 310
Behold this sight: see here the friend of Zeus,
Who helped to seat him in his sovereignty,
With what foul outrage I am crushed by him!

Okean. I see, Prometheus, and I wish to give thee .

¹ The home of Okeanos was in the far west, at the boundary of the great stream surrounding the whole world, from which he took his name.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

My best advice, all subtle though thou be.
Know thou thyself,¹ and fit thy soul to moods
To thee full new. New king the Gods have now ;
But if thou utter words thus rough and sharp,
Perchance, though sitting far away on high, 330
Zeus yet may hear thee, and his present wrath
Seem to thee but as child's play of distress.
Nay, thou poor sufferer, quit the rage thou hast,
And seek a remedy for these thine ills.
A tale thrice-told, perchance I seem to speak :
Lo! this, Prometheus, is the punishment
Of thine o'er lofty speech, nor art thou yet
Humbled, nor yieldest to thy miseries,
And fain would'st add fresh evils unto these.
But thou, if thou wilt take me as thy teacher, 330
Wilt not kick out against the pricks ;² seeing well
A monarch reigns who gives account to none.
And now I go, and will an effort make,
If I, perchance, may free thee from thy woes ;
Be still then, hush thy petulance of speech,
Or knowest thou not, o'er-clever as thou art,
That idle tongues must still their forfeit pay ?
Prom. I envy thee, seeing thou art free from blame
Though thou shared'st all, and in my cause wast bold ;³
Nay, let me be, nor trouble thou thyself ; 340
Thou wilt not, canst not soothe Him ; very hard
Is He of soothing. Look to it thyself,
Lest thou some mischief meet with in the way.

¹ One of the sayings of the Seven Sages, already recognised and quoted as a familiar proverb.

² See note on Agam. 1602.

³ In the mythos, Okeanos had given his daughter Hesione in marriage to Prometheus after the theft of fire, and thus had identified himself with his transgression.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

Okean. It is thy wont thy neighbours' minds to school

Far better than thine own. From deeds, not words,
I draw my proof. But do not draw me back
When I am hasting on, for lo, I deem,
I deem that Zeus will grant this boon to me,
That I should free thee from these woes of thine.

Proth. I thank thee much, yea, ne'er will cease to thank ;

For thou no whit of zeal dost lack ; yet take,
I pray, no trouble for me ; all in vain
Thy trouble, nothing helping, e'en if thou 250
Should'st care to take the trouble. Nay, be still ;
Keep out of harm's way ; sufferer though I be,
I would not therefore wish to give my woes
A wider range o'er others. No, not so :
For lo ! my mind is wearied with the grief
Of that my kinsman Atlas,¹ who doth stand
In the far West, supporting on his shoulders
The pillars of the earth and heaven, a burden
His arms can ill but hold : I pity too
The giant dweller of Kilikian caves, 300
Dread portent, with his hundred hands, subdued

¹ In the Theogony of Hesiod (v. 509), Prometheus and Atlas appear as the sons of two sisters. As other Titans were thought of as buried under volcanoes, so this one was identified with the mountain which had been seen by travellers to Western Africa, or in the seas beyond it, rising like a column to support the vault of heaven. In Herodotos (iv. 174) and all later writers, the name is given to the chain of mountains in Lybia, as being the "pillar of the firmament ;" but Humboldt and others identify it with the lonely peak of Teneriffe, as seen by Phœnikian or Hellenic voyagers. Teneriffe, too, like most of the other Titan mountains, was at one time volcanic. Homer (Odys. i. 53) represents him as holding the pillars which separate heaven from earth ; Hesiod (Theogon. v. 517) as himself standing near the Hesperides (this too points to Teneriffe), sustaining the heavens with his head and shoulders.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

By force, the mighty Typhon,¹ who arose
'Gainst all the Gods, with sharp and dreadful jaws
Hissing out slaughter, and from out his eyes
There flashed the terrible brightness as of one
Who would lay low the sovereignty of Zeus.
But the unsleeping dart of Zeus came on him,
Down-swooping thunderbolt that breathes out flame,
Which from his lofty boastings startled him, •
For he i' the heart was struck, to ashes burnt, 370
His strength all thunder-shattered; and he lies
A helpless, powerless carcase, near the strait
Of the great sea, fast pressed beneath the roots
Of ancient Ætna, where on highest peak
Hephæstos sits and smites his iron red-hot,
From whence hereafter streams of fire shall burst,²
Devouring with fierce jaws the golden plains
Of fruitful, fair Sikelia. Such the wrath
That Typhon shall belch forth with bursts of storm,
Hot, breathing fire, and unapproachable,
Though burnt and charred by thunderbolts of Zeus. 380
Not inexperienced art thou, nor dost need
My teaching: save thyself, as thou know'st how;
And I will drink my fortune to the dregs,
Till from his wrath the mind of Zeus shall rest.³

¹ The volcanic character of the whole of Asia Minor, and the liability to earthquakes which has marked nearly every period of its history, led men to connect it also with the traditions of the Titans, some accordingly placing the home of Typhon in Phrygia, some near Sardis, some, as here, in Kilikia. Hesiod (Theogon. v. 820) describes Typhon (or Typhoeus) as a serpent-monster hissing out fire; Pindar (Pyth. i. 30, viii. 21) as lying with his head and breast crushed beneath the weight of Ætna, and his feet extending to Cumæ.

² The words point probably to an eruption, then fresh in men's memories, which had happened B.C. 476.

³ By some editors this speech from "No, not so," to "thou know'st how," is assigned to Okeanos.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

Okean. Know'st thou not this, Prometheus, even this,
Of wrath's disease wise words the healers are ?

Prom. Yea, could one soothe the troubled heart in time,
Nor seek by force to tame the soul's proud flesh.

Okean. But in due forethought with bold daring blent,
What mischief see'st thou lurking ? Tell me this. 390

Prom. Toil bootless, and simplicity full fond.

Okean. Let me, I pray, that sickness suffer, since
'Tis best being wise to have not wisdom's show.

Prom. Nay, but this error shall be deemed as mine.

Okean. Thy word then clearly sends me home at once.

Prom. Yea, lest thy pity for me make a foe. . . .

Okean. What ! of that new king on his mighty throne ?

Prom. Look to it, lest his heart be vexed with thee.

Okean. Thy fate, Prometheus, teaches me that lesson.

Prom. Away, withdraw ! keep thou the mind thou hast. 400

Okean. Thou urgest me who am in act to haste ;
For this my bird four-footed flaps with wings
The clear path of the æther ; and full fain
Would he bend knee in his own stall at home. [Exit

STROPHE I

Chor. I grieve, Prometheus, for thy dreary fate,
Shedding from tender eyes
The dew of plenteous tears ;
With streams, as when the watery south wind blows,
My cheek is wet ; 410
For lo ! these things are all unenviable,
And Zeus, by his own laws his sway maintaining,
Shows to the elder Gods
A mood of haughtiness.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

ANTISTROPHE I

And all the country echoeth with the moan,
And poureth many a tear
For that magnific power
Of ancient days far-seen that thou did'st share
With those of one blood sprung ;
And all the mortal men who hold the plain
Of holy Asia as their land of sojourn,
They grieve in sympathy
For thy woes lamentable.

STROPHE II

And they, the maiden band who find their home
On distant Colchian coasts,
Fearless of fight,¹
Or Skythian horde in earth's remotest clime,
By far Mæotic lake ;²

ANTISTROPHE II

*And warlike glory of Arabia's tribes,³
Who nigh to Caucasos
In rock-fort dwell,
An army fearful, with sharp-pointed spear
Raging in war's array.

¹ These are, of course, the Amazons, who were believed to have come through Thrakè from the Tauric Chersonesos, and had left traces of their name and habits in the Attic traditions of Theseus.

² Beyond the plains of Skythia, and the lake Mæotis (the sea of Azov) there would be the great river Okeanos, which was believed to flow round the earth.

³ Sarmatia has been conjectured instead of Arabia. No Greek author sanctions the extension of the latter name to so remote a region as that north of the Caspian.

PROMÆTHEUS BOUND

STROPHE III

One other Titan only have I seen,
One other of the Gods,
Thus bound in woes of adamantine strength—
Atlas, who ever groans
Beneath the burden of a crushing might,
The out-spread vault of heaven.

ANTISTROPHE III

And lo! the ocean billows murmur loud 440
In one accord with him;¹
The sea-depths groan, and Hades' swarthy pit
Re-echoeth the sound,
And fountains of clear rivers, as they flow,
Bewail his bitter griefs.

Prom. Think not it is through pride or stiff self-will
That I am silent. But my heart is worn,
Self-contemplating,* as I see myself
Thus outraged. Yet what other hand than mine
Gave these young Gods in fulness all their gifts?
But these I speak not of; for I should tell
To you that know them. But those woes of men,² 450
List ye to them,—how they, before as babes,
By me were roused to reason, taught to think;
And this I say, not finding fault with men,
But showing my good-will in all I gave.

¹ The Greek leaves the object of the sympathy undefined, but it seems better to refer it to that which Atlas receives from the waste of waters around, and the dark world beneath, than to the pity shown to Prometheus. This has already been dwelt on in line 421.

² The passage that follows has for modern palæontologists the interest of coinciding with their views as to the progress of human society, and the condition of mankind during what has been called the "Stone" period. Comp. Lucretius, v. 955-984.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

For first, though seeing, all in vain they saw,
And hearing, heard not rightly. But, like forms
Of phantom-dreams, throughout their life's whole length

They muddled all at random ; did not know
Houses of brick that catch the sunlight's warmth,
Nor yet the work of carpentry. They dwelt,
In hollowed holes, like swarms of tiny ants, 460
In sunless depths of caverns ; and they had
No certain signs of winter, nor of spring
Flower-laden, nor of summer with her fruits ;
But without counsel fared their whole life long,
Until I showed the risings of the stars,
And settings hard to recognise.¹ And I
Found Number for them, chief device of all,
*Groupings of letters, Memory's handmaid that,
And mother of the Muses.² And I first
Bound in the yoke wild steeds, submissive made 470
Or to the collar or men's limbs, that so
They might in man's place bear his greatest toils ;
And horses trained to love the rein I yoked
To chariots, glory of wealth's pride of state ;³
Nor was it any one but I that found
Sea-crossing, canvas-winged cars of ships :
Such rare designs inventing (wretched me !)

¹ Comp. Mr. Blakesley's note on Herod. ii. 4, as showing that here there was the greater risk of faulty observation.

² Another reading gives perhaps a better sense—

" Memory, handmaid true
And mother of the Muses."

³ In Greece, as throughout the East, the ox was used for all agricultural labours, the horse by the noble and the rich, either in war chariots, or stately processions, or in chariot races in the great games.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

For mortal men, I yet have no device
By which to free myself from this my woe.¹

Chor. Foul shame thou sufferest : of thy sense bereaved, 480

Thou errest greatly : and, like leech unskilled,
Thou lovest heart when smitten with disease,
And know'st not how to find the remedies
Wherewith to heal thine own soul's sicknesses.

Prom. Hearing what yet remains thou'lt wonder more,
What arts and what resources I devised :
And this the chief : if any one fell ill,
There was no help for him, nor healing food,
Nor unguent, nor yet potion ; but for want
Of drugs they wasted, till I showed to them
The blendings of all mild medicaments,² 490
Wherewith they ward the attacks of sickness sore.
I gave them many modes of prophecy ;³
And I first taught them what dreams needs must prove True visions, and made known the ominous sounds
Full hard to know ; and tokens by the way,
And flights of taloned birds I clearly marked,—
Those on the right propitious to mankind,

¹ Compare with this the account of the inventions of Palamedes in Sophocles, Fragm. 379.

² Here we can recognise the knowledge of one who had studied in the schools of Pythagoras, or had at any rate picked up their terminology. A more immediate connexion may perhaps be traced with the influence of Epimenides, who was said to have spent many years in searching out the healing virtues of plants, and to have written books about them.

³ The lines that follow form almost a manual of the art of divination as then practised. The "ominous sounds" include chance words, strange cries, any unexpected utterance that connected itself with men's fears for the future. The flights of birds were watched by the diviner as he faced the north, and so the region on the right hand was that of the sunrise, light, blessedness ; on the left there were darkness and gloom and death.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

And those sinister,—and what form of life
They each maintain, and what their enmities
Each with the other, and their loves and friendships ; 510
And of the inward parts the plumpness smooth.
And with what colour they the Gods would please,
And the streaked comeliness of gall and liver :
And with burnt limbs enwrapt in fat, and chine,
I led men on to art full difficult :

And I gave eyes to omens drawn from fire,
Till then dim-visioned. So far then for this.
And 'neath the earth the hidden boons for men,
Bronze, iron, silver, gold, who else could say 515
That he, ere I did, found them ? None, I know,
Unless he fain would babble idle words.
In one short word, then, learn the truth condensed,—
Allarts of mortals from Prometheus spring.

Chor. Nay, be not thou to men so over-kind,
While thou thyself art in sore evil case ;
For I am sanguine that thou too, released
From bonds, shalt be as strong as Zeus himself.

Prom. It is not thus that Fate's decree is fixed ;
But I, long crushed with twice ten thousand woes 520
And bitter pains, shall then escape my bonds ;
Art is far weaker than Necessity.

Chor. Who guides the helm, then, of Necessity ?

Prom. Fates triple-formed, Errinyes unforgetting.

Chor. Is Zeus, then, weaker in his might than these ?

Prom. Not even He can 'scape the thing decreed.

Chor. What is decreed for Zeus but still to reign ?

Prom. Thou may'st no further learn, ask thou no more.

Chor. 'Tis doubtless some dread secret which thou hidest.

Prom. Of other theme make mention, for the time 530
Is not yet come to utter this, but still

PROMETHEUS BOUND

It must be hidden to the uttermost ;
For by thus keeping it it is that I
Escape my bondage foul, and these my pains.

STROPHE I

Chor. Ah ! ne'er may Zeus the Lord,
Whose sovran sway rules all,
His strength in conflict set
Against my feeble will !
Nor may I fail to serve
The Gods with holy feast
Of whole burnt-offerings,
Where the stream ever flows
That bears my father's name,
The great Okeanos !
Nor may I sin in speech !
May this grace more and more
Sink deep into my soul
And never fade away !

540

ANTISTROPHE I

Sweet is it in strong hope
To spend long years of life,
With bright and cheering joy
Our heart's thoughts nourishing.
I shudder, seeing thee
Thus vexed and harassed sore
By twice ten thousand woes ;
For thou in pride of heart,
Having no fear of Zeus,
In thine own obstinacy,
Dost show for mortal men,
Prometheus, love o'ermuch.

550

PROMETHEUS BOUND

STROPHE II

See how that boon, dear friends,
For thee is bootless found.
Say, where is any help?
What aid from mortals comes?
Hast thou not seen this brief and powerless life,
Fleeting as dreams, with which man's purblind race
Is fast in fetters bound? 560
Never shall counsels vain
Of mortal men break through
The harmony of Zeus.

ANTISTROPHE II

This lesson have I learnt
Beholding thy sad fate,
Prometheus! Other strains
Come back upon my mind,
When I sang wedding hymns around thy bath,
And at thy bridal bed, when thou did'st take
In wedlock's holy bands
One of the same sire born, 570
Our own Hesione,
Persuading her with gifts
As wife to share thy couch.

Enter Io in form like a fair woman with a heifer's horns,¹ followed by the Spectre of ARGOS

Io. What land is this? What people? Whom shall I

¹ So Io was represented, we are told, by Greek sculptors (Hered. ii. 41), as Isis was by those of Egypt. The points of contact between the myth of Io and that of Prometheus, as adopted, or perhaps developed, by Æschylos are—(1) that from her the destined deliverer of the chained Titan is to come; (2) that both were suffering from the cruelty of Zeus; (3) that the

PROMETHEUS BOUND

Say that I see thus vexed
With bit and curb of rock?
For what offence dost thou
Bear fatal punishment?
Tell me to what far land
I've wandered here in woe.

Ah me! ah me!

Again the gadfly stings me miserable.

Spectre of Argos, thou, the earth-born one—

Ah, keep him off, O Earth!

I fear to look upon that herdsman dread,

580

Him with ten thousand eyes:

Ah lo! he cometh with his crafty look,

Whom Earth refuses even dead to hold;¹

But coming from beneath

He hunts me miserable,

And drives me famished o'er the sea-beach sand.

STROPHE

And still his waxened reed-pipe soundeth clear

A soft and slumberous strain;

O heavens! O ye Gods!

590

Whither do these long wanderings lead me on?

For what offence, O son of Cronos, what, wanderings of Io gave scope for the wild tales of far countries on which the imagination of the Athenians fed greedily. But, as the Suppliants may serve to show, the story itself had a strange fascination for him. In the birth of Epaphos, and Io's release from her frenzy, he saw, it may be, a reconciliation of what had seemed hard to reconcile, a solution of the problems of the world, like in kind to that which was shadowed forth in the lost Prometheus Unbound.

¹ Argos had been slain by Hermes, and his eyes transferred by Hera to the tail of the peacock, and that bird was henceforth sacred to her.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

Hast thou thus bound me fast
In these great miseries?

Ah me! ah me!

And why with terror of the gadfly's sting
Dost thou thus vex me, frenzied in my soul?
Burn me with fire, or bury me in earth,
Or to wild sea-beasts give me as a prey:

Nay, grudge me not, O King,
An answer to my prayers:

600

Enough my many-wandered wanderings
Have exercised my soul,
Nor have I power to learn
How to avert the woe.

(To Prometheus.) Hear'st thou the voice of maiden crowned with horns?

Prom. Surely I heard the maid by gadfly driven,
Daughter of Inachos, who warmed the heart
Of Zeus with love, and now through Hera's hate
Is tried, perforce, with wanderings over-long?

ANTISTROPHE

Io. How is it that thou speak'st my father's name?

Tell me, the suffering one,

610

Who art thou, who, poor wretch,

Who thus so truly nam'st me miserable,

And tell'st the plague from Heaven,

Which with its haunting stings

Wears me to death? Ah woe!

And I with famished and unseemly bounds
Rush madly, driven by Hera's jealous craft.

Ah, who of all that suffer, born to woe,
Have trouble like the pain that I endure?

620

But thou, make clear to me,
What yet for me remains,

PROMETHEUS BOUND

What remedy, what healing for my pangs.

Show me, if thou dost know :

Speak out and tell to me,

The maid by wanderings vexed.

Prom. I will say plainly all thou seek'st to know ;
Not in dark tangled riddles, but plain speech,
As it is meet that friends to friends should speak ;
Thou see'st Prometheus who gave fire to men. 630

Io. O thou to men as benefactor known,
Why, poor Prometheus, sufferest thou this pain ?

Prom. I have but now mine own woes ceased to wail.

Io. Wilt thou not then bestow this boon on me ?

Prom. Say what thou seek'st, for I will tell thee all.

Io. Tell me, who fettered thee in this ravine ?

Prom. The counsel was of Zeus, the hand Hephæstos'.

Io. Of what offence dost thou the forfeit pay ?

Prom. Thus much alone am I content to tell.

Io. Tell me, at least, besides, what end shall come 640
To my drear wanderings ; when the time shall be.

Prom. Not to know this is better than to know.

Io. Nay, hide not from me what I have to bear.

Prom. It is not that I grudge the boon to thee.

Io. Why then delayest thou to tell the whole ?

Prom. Not from ill will, but loth to vex thy soul.

Io. Nay, care thou not beyond what pleases me.

Prom. If thou desire it I must speak. Hear then.

Chor. Not yet though ; grant me share of pleasure too. 650
Let us first ask the tale of her great woe,

While she unfolds her life's consuming chances ;

Her future sufferings let her learn from thee.

Prom. 'Tis thy work, Io, to grant these their wish,
On other grounds and as thy father's kin : ¹

¹ Inachos the father of Io (identified with the Argive river of the same name), was, like all rivers, a son of Okeanos, and therefore brother to the nymphs who had come to see Prometheus.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

For to bewail and moan one's evil chance,
Here where one trusts to gain a pitying tear
From those who hear,—this is not labour lost.

Io. I know not how to disobey your wish ;
So ye shall learn the whole that ye desire
In speech full clear. And yet I blush to tell 660
The storm that came from God, and brought the loss
Of maiden face, what way it seized on me.
For nightly visions coming evermore
Into my virgin bower, sought to woo me
With glozing words. “O virgin greatly blest,
Why art thou still a virgin when thou might'st
Attain to highest wedlock? For with dart
Of passion for thee Zeus doth glow, and fain
Would make thee his. And thou, O child, spurn not 670
The bed of Zeus, but go to Lerna's field,
Where feed thy father's flocks and herds,
That so the eye of Zeus may find repose
From this his craving.” With such visions I
Was haunted every evening, till I dared
To tell my father all these dreams of night,
And he to Pytho and Dodona sent Full many to consult the Gods, that he,
Might learn what deeds and words would please Heaven's lords.

And they came bringing speech of oracles
Shot with dark sayings, dim and hard to know. 680
At last a clear word came to Inachos
Charging him plainly, and commanding him
To thrust me from my country and my home,
To stray at large¹ to utmost bounds of earth ;

¹ The words used have an almost technical meaning as applied to animals that were consecrated to the service of a God, and set free to wander where they liked. The fate of Io, as at once devoted to Zeus and animalised in form, was thus shadowed forth in the very language of the Oracle.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

And, should he gainsay, that the fiery bolt
Of Zeus should come and sweep away his race.
And he, by Loxias' oracles induced,
Thrust me, against his will, against mine too,
And drove me from my home ; but spite of all,
The curb of Zeus constrained him this to do. 610
And then forthwith my face and mind were changed ;
And horned, as ye see me, stung to the quick
By biting gadfly, I with maddened leap
Rushed to Kerchneia's fair and limpid stream,
And fount of Lerna.¹ And a giant herdsman,
Argos, full rough of temper, followed me,
With many an eye beholding, on my track :
And him a sudden and unlooked-for doom
Deprived of life. And I, by gadfly stung,
By scourge from Heaven am driven from land to land. 700
What has been done thou hearest. And if thou
Can'st tell what yet remains of woe, declare it ;
Nor in thy pity soothe me with false words ;
For hollow words, I deem, are worst of ills.

Chor. Away, away, let be :

Ne'er thought I that such tales
Would ever, ever come unto mine ears ;
Nor that such terrors, woes and outrages,
Hard to look on, hard to bear, 710
Would chill my soul with sharp goad, double-edged.
Ah fate ! Ah fate !

I shudder, seeing lo's fortune strange.

Prom. Thou art too quick in groaning, full of fear :
Wait thou a while until thou hear the rest.

Chor. Speak thou and tell. Unto the sick 'tis sweet
Clearly to know what yet remains of pain.

¹ Lerna was the lake near the mouth of the Inachos, close to the sea. Kerchneia may perhaps be identified with the Kenchreæ, the haven of Korinth in later geographies.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

Prom. Your former wish ye gained full easily.
Your first desire was to learn of her 720
The tale she tells of her own sufferings ;
Now therefore hear the woes that yet remain
For this poor maid to bear at Hera's hands.
And thou, O child of Inachos ! take heed
To these my words, that thou may'st hear the goal
Of all thy wanderings. First then, turning hence
Towards the sunrise, tread the untilled plains,
And thou shalt reach the Skythian nomads, those ¹
Who on smooth-rolling waggons dwell aloft
In wicker houses, with far-darting bows 730
Duly equipped. Approach thou not to these,
But trending round the coasts on which the surf
Beats with loud murmurs, ² traverse thou that clime.
On the left hand there dwell the Chalybes, ³
Who work in iron. Of these do thou beware,
For fierce are they and most inhospitable ;
And thou wilt reach the river fierce and strong,
True to its name. ⁴ This seek not thou to cross,
For it is hard to ford, until thou come
To Caucasos itself, of all high hills
The highest, where a river pours its strength

¹ The wicker huts used by Skythian or Thrakian nomads (the Calmucks of modern geographers) are described by Herodotos (iv. 46) and are still in use.

² Sc., the N.E. boundary of the Euxine, where spurs of the Caucasos ridge approach the sea.

³ The Chálybes are placed by geographers to the south of Colchis. The description of the text indicates a locality farther to the north.

⁴ Probably the Araxes, which the Greeks would connect with a word conveying the idea of a torrent dashing on the rocks. The description seems to imply a river flowing into the Euxine from the Caucasos, and the condition is fulfilled by the Hypanis or Kouban.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

From the high peaks themselves. And thou must cross 740

Those summits near the stars, must onward go
Towards the south, where thou shalt find the host
Of the Amâzons, hating men, whose home
Shall one day be around Thermôdon's bank,
By Themiskyra,¹ where the ravenous jaws
Of Salmÿdessos ope upon the sea,²
Treacherous to sailors, stepdame stern to ships.²
And they with right good-will shall be thy guides ;
And thou, hard by a broad pool's narrow gates,
Wilt pass to the Kimmerian isthmus. Leaving
This boldly, thou must cross Mæotic channel ;³ 750
And there shall be great fame 'mong mortal men
Of this thy journey, and the Bosporos⁴
Shall take its name from thee. And Europe's plain
Then quitting, thou shalt gain the Asian coast.
Doth not the all-ruling monarch of the Gods
Seem all ways cruel ? For, although a God,
He, seeking to embrace this mortal maid,
Imposed these wanderings on her. Thou hast found,

¹ When the Amazons appear in contact with Greek history, they are found in Thrace. But they had come from the coast of Pontos, and near the mouth of the Thermodon (Thermê). The words of Prometheus point to yet earlier migrations from the East.

² Here, as in Soph. Antig. (970) the name Salmÿdessos represents the rockbound, havenless coast from the promontory of Thynias to the entrance of the Bosporos, which had given to the Black Sea its earlier name of Axenos, the "inhospitable."

³ The track is here in some confusion. From the Amazons south of the Caucasos, Io is to find her way to the Tauric Chersonese (the Crimea) and the Kimmerian Bosporos, which flows into the Sea of Azov, and so to return to Asia.

⁴ Here, as in a hundred other instances, a false etymology has become the parent of a myth. The name Bosporos is probably Asiatic not Greek, and has an entirely different signification.

PROMETHEUS BOUND .

O maiden ! bitter suitor for thy hand ;
* For great as are the ills thou now hast heard,
Know that as yet not e'en the prelude's known. 760

Io. Ah woe ! woe ! woe !

Prom. Again thou groan'st and criest. What wilt do
When thou shalt learn the evils yet to come ?

Chor. What ! are there troubles still to come for her ? ~

Prom. Yea, stormy sea of woe most lamentable.

Io. What gain is it to live ? Why cast I not Myself at once from this high precipice,
And, dashed to earth, be free from all my woes ?
Far better were it once for all to die

Than all one's days to suffer pain and grief. 770

Prom. My struggles then full hardly thou would'st bear,

* For whom there is no destiny of death ;
For that might bring a respite from my woes :
But now there is no limit to my pangs
Till Zeus be hurled out from his sovereignty.

Io. What ! shall Zeus e'er be hurled from his high state ?

Prom. Thou would'st rejoice, I trow, to see that fall.

Io. How should I not, when Zeus so foully wrongs me ?

Prom. That this is so thou now may'st hear from me.

Io. Who then shall rob him of his sceptred sway ? 780

Prom. Himself shall do it by his own rash plans.

Io. But how ? Tell this, unless it bringeth harm.

Prom. He shall wed one for whom one day he'll grieve.

Io. Heaven-born or mortal ? Tell, if tell thou may'st.

Prom. Why ask'st thou who ? I may not tell thee that.

Io. Shall his bride hurl him from his throne of might ?

Prom. Yea ; she shall bear child mightier than his size.

Io. Has he no way to turn aside that doom ?

PROMETHEUS BOUND

Prom. No, none ; unless I from my bonds be loosed.¹

Io. Who then shall loose thee 'gainst the will of Zeus ? 700

Prom. It must be one of thy posterity.

Io. What, shall a child of mine free thee from ills ?

Prom. Yea, the third generation after ten.²

Io. No more thine oracles are clear to me.

Prom.* Nay, seek not thou thine own drear fate to know.

Io. Do not, a boon presenting, then withdraw it.

Prom. Of two alternatives, I'll give thee choice.

Io. Tell me of what, then give me leave to choose.

Prom. I give it then. Choose, or that I should tell
Thy woes to come, or who shall set me free. 800

Chor. Of these be willing one request to grant
To her, and one to me ; nor scorn my words :
Tell her what yet of wanderings she must bear,
And me who shall release thee. This I crave.

Prom. Since ye are eager, I will not refuse
To utter fully all that ye desire.
Thee, Io, first I'll tell thy wanderings wild,
Thou, write it in the tablets of thy mind.
When thou shalt cross the straits, of continents
The boundary,³ take thou the onward path
On to the fiery-hued and sun-tracked East. 810

¹ The lines refer to the story that Zeus loved Thetis the daughter of Nereus, and followed her to Caucasos, but abstained from marriage with her because Prometheus warned him that the child born of that union should overthrow his father. Here the future is used of what was still contingent only. In the lost play of the Trilogy the myth was possibly brought to its conclusion and connected with the release of Prometheus.

² Heracles, whose genealogy was traced through Alcmena, Perseus, Danae, Danaos and seven other names, to Epaphos and Io.

³ Probably the Kimmerian Bosphoros. The Tanais or Phasis has, however, been conjectured.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

[And first of all, to frozen Northern blasts
 'Thou'lt come, and there beware the rushing whirl,
 Lest it should come upon thee suddenly,
 And sweep thee onward with the cloud-rack wild ;] ¹
 Crossing the sea-surf till thou come at last Unto Kisthene's Gorgoneian plains,
 Where dwell the grey-haired virgin Phorkides,²
 Three, swan-shaped, with one eye between them all
 And but one tooth ; whom nor the sun beholds
 With radiant beams, nor yet the moon by night :
 And near them are their winged sisters three,
 The Gorgons, serpent-tressed, and hating men, ⁶⁷
 Whom mortal wight may not behold and live. ⁸²⁰
 *Such is one ill I bid thee guard against ;
 Now hear another monstrous sight : Beware
 The sharp-beaked hounds of Zeus that never bark,³
 The Gryphons, and the one-eyed, mounted host
 Of Arimaspians, who around the stream
 That flows o'er gold, the ford of Pluto, dwell :⁴

¹ The history of the passage in brackets is curious enough to call for a note. They are not in any extant MS., but they are found in a passage quoted by Galen (v. p. 454), as from the Prometheus Bound, and are inserted here by Mr. Paley.

² Kisthene belongs to the geography of legend, lying somewhere on the shore of the great ocean-river in Lybia or Æthiopia, at the end of the world, a great mountain in the far West, beyond the Hesperides, the dwelling-place, as here, of the Gorgons, the daughters of Phorkys. Those first-named are the Graiee.

³ Here, like the "winged hound" of v. 1043, for the eagles that are the messengers of Zeus.

⁴ We are carried back again from the fabled West to the fabled East. The Arimaspians, with one eye, and the Grypes or Gryphons (the griffins of mediæval heraldry), quadrupeds with the wings and beaks of eagles, were placed by most writers (Herod. iv. 13, 27) in the north of Europe, in or beyond the terra incognita of Skythia. The mention of the "ford of Pluto" and Æthiopia, however, may possibly imply (if we

PROMETHEUS BOUND

 Thou shalt approach, the swarthy tribes who dwell
 By the sun's fountain,¹ Æthiopia's stream :
 By its banks wend thy way until thou come
 To that great fall where from the Bybline hills 830
 The Neilos pours its pure and holy flood ;
 And it shall guide thee to Neilotic land,
 Three-angled, where, O Io, 'tis decreed
 For thee and for thy progeny to found
 A far-off colony. And if of this
 Aught seem to thee as stammering speech obscure,
 Ask yet again and learn it thoroughly :
 Far more of leisure have I than I like.

Chor. If thou hast aught to add, aught left untold
 Of her sore-wasting wanderings, speak it out ; 840
 But if thou hast said all, then grant to us .
 The boon we asked. Thou dost not, sure, forget it.

Prom. The whole course of her journeying she hath heard,
 And that she know she hath not heard in vain
 I will tell out what troubles she hath borne
 Before she came here, giving her sure proof
 Of these my words. The greater bulk of things
 I will pass o'er, and to the very goal identify it, as Mr. Paley does, with the Tartessos of Spain, or Boetis—Guadalquivir) that Æschylos followed another legend which placed them in the West. There is possibly a paronomasia between Pluto, the God of Hades, and Plutos, the ideal

 God of riches.

¹ The name was applied by later writers (Quintus Curtius, iv. 7, 22 ; Lucretius, vi. 848) to the fountain in the temple of Jupiter Ammon in the great Oasis. The "river Æthiops" may be purely imaginary, but it may also suggest the possibility of some vague knowledge of the Niger, or more probably of the Nile itself in the upper regions of its course. The "Bybline hills" carry the name Byblos, which we only read of as belonging to a town in the Delta, to the Second Cataract.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

Of all thy wanderings go. For when thou cam'st
To the Molossian plains, and by the grove¹
Of lofty-ridged Dodona, and the shrine
Oracular of Zeus Thesprotian, 850
And the strange portent of the talking oaks,
By which full clearly, not in riddle dark,
Thou wast addressed as noble spouse of Zeus,—
If aught of pleasure such things give to thee,—
Thence strung to frenzy, thou did'st rush along
The sea-coast's path to Rhea's mighty gulf,²
In backward way from whence thou now art vexed,
And for all time to come that reach of sea,
Know well, from thee Ionian shall be called,
To all men record of thy journeyings. 860
These then are tokens to thee that my mind
Sees somewhat more than that is manifest.

What follows (to the Chorus) I will speak to you and her

In common, on the track of former words
Returning once again. A city stands,
Canôbos, at its country's furthest bound,
Hard by the mouth and silt-bank of the Nile ;
There Zeus shall give thee back thy mind again,³
With hand that works no terror touching thee,—
Touch only—and thou then shalt bear a child
Of Zeus begotten, Epaphos, "Touch-born," 870
Swarthy of hue, whose lot shall be to reap

² The Adriatic or Ionian Gulf.

³ In the Suppliants, Zeus is said to have soothed her, and restored her to her human consciousness by his "divine breathings." The thought underlying the legend may be taken either as a distortion of some primitive tradition, or as one of the "unconscious prophecies" of heathenism. The deliverer is not to be born after the common manner of men, and is to have a divine as well as a human parentage.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

The whole plain watered by the broad-streamed Neilos :
And in the generation fifth from him
A household numbering fifty shall return
Against their will to Argos, in their flight
From wedlock with their cousins.¹ And they too,
(Kites but a little space behind the doves)
With eager hopes pursuing marriage rites
Beyond pursuit shall come ; and God shall grudge
To give up their sweet bodies. And the land
Pelagian² shall receive them, when by stroke
Of woman's murderous hand these men shall lie
Smitten to death by daring deed of night :
For every bride shall take her husband's life,
And dip in blood the sharp two-edged sword
(So to my foes may Kypri³ show herself!)
Yet one of that fair band shall love persuade
Her husband not to slaughter, and her will Shall lose its edge ; and she shall make her choice
Rather as weak than murderous to be known.
And she at Argos shall a royal seed Bring forth (long speech 'twould take to tell this clear)
Famed for his arrows, who shall set me free⁴
From these my woes. Such was the oracle
Mine ancient mother Themis, Titan-born,

¹ See the argument of the Suppliants, who, as the daughters of Danaos, descended from Epaphos, are here referred to. The passage is noticeable as showing that the theme of that tragedy was already present to the poet's thoughts.

² Argos. So in the Suppliants, Pelasgos is the mythical king of the Apian land who receives them.

³ Hypermnestra, who spared Lynceus, and by him became the mother of Abas and a line of Argive kings.

⁴ Heracles, who came to Caucasos, and with his arrows slew the eagle that devoured Prometheus.

Gave to me ; but the manner and the means,—
That needs a lengthy tale to tell the whole,
And thou can'st nothing gain by learning it.

Io. Eleleu ! Oh, Eleleu !¹

The throbbing pain inflames me, and the mood
Of frenzy-smitten rage ;
The gadfly's pointed sting,
Not forged with fire, attacks,
And my heart beats against my breast with fear. 900
Mine eyes whirl round and round !
Out of my course I'm borne
By the wild spirit of fierce agony,
And cannot curb my lips,
And turbid speech at random dashes on
Upon the waves of dread calamity.

STROPHE I

Chor. Wise, very wise was he
Who first in thought conceived this 'maxim sage,
And spread it with his speech,"—
That the best wedlock is with equals found,
And that a craftsman, born to work with hands,
Should not desire to wed
Or with the soft luxurious heirs of wealth, 910
Or with the race that boast their lineage high.

ANTISTROPHE I

Oh ne'er, oh ne'er, dread Fates,
May ye behold me as the bride of Zeus,
The partner of his couch,

¹ The word is simply an interjection of pain, but one so characteristic that I have thought it better to reproduce it than to give any English equivalent.

² The maxim, "Marry with a woman thine equal," was ascribed to Pittacos.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

Nor may I wed with any heaven-born spouse !
For I shrink back, beholding Io's lot
Of loveless maidenhood,
Consumed and smitten low exceedingly
By the wild wanderings from great Hera sent !

STROPHE II

To me, when wedlock is on equal terms,
It gives no cause to fear :
Ne'er may the love of any of the Gods,
The strong Gods, look on me
With glance I cannot 'scape !

920

ANTISTROPHE II

That fate is war that none can war against,
Source of resourceless ill ;
Nor know I what might then become of me :
I see not how to 'scape
The counsel deep of Zeus.

Prom. Yea, of a truth shall Zeus, though stiff of will,
Be brought full low. Such bed of wedlock now
Is he preparing, one to cast him forth
In darkness from his sovereignty and throne.
And then the curse his father Cronos spake
Shall have its dread completion, even that
He uttered when he left his ancient throne ;
And from these troubles no one of the Gods
But me can clearly show the way to 'scape.
I know the time and manner : therefore now
Let him sit fearless, in his peals on high
Putting his trust, and shaking in his hands
His darts fire-breathing. Nought shall they avail
To hinder him from falling shamefully
A fall intolerable. Such a combatant

He arms against himself, a marvel dread,
Who shall a fire discover mightier far
Than the red levin, and a sound more dread
Than roaring of the thunder, and shall shiver
That plague sea-born that causeth earth to quake,

And stumbling on this evil, he shall learn
How far apart a king's lot from a slave's.

Chor. What thou dost wish thou mutterest against Zeus.

Prom. Things that shall be, and things I wish, I speak.

Chor. And must we look for one to master Zeus?

Prom. Yea, troubles harder far than these are his.

Chor. Art not afraid to vent such words as these?

Prom. What can I fear whose fate is not to die?

Chor. But He may send on thee worse pain than this.

Prom. So let Him do : nought finds me unprepared.

Chor. Wisdom is theirs who Adrasteia worship.¹

Prom. Worship then, praise and flatter him that rules ;

My care for Zeus is nought, and less than nought :
Let Him act, let Him rule this little while,
E'en as He will ; for long He shall not rule
Over the Gods. But lo ! I see at hand
The courier of the Gods, the minister
Of our new sovereign. Doubtless he has come
To bring me tidings of some new device.

¹ The Euhemerism of later scholiasts derived the name from a king Adrastos, who was said to have been the first to build a temple to Nemesis, and so the power thus worshipped was called after his name. A better etymology leads us to see in it the idea of the "inevitable" law of retribution working unseen by men, and independently even of the arbitrary will of the Gods, and bringing destruction upon the proud and haughty.

Enter HERMES

Herm. Thee do I speak to,—thee, the teacher wise,
The bitterly o'er-bitter, who 'gainst Gods
Hast sinned in giving gifts to short-lived men—
I speak to thee, the filcher of bright fire.
The Father bids thee say what marriage thou
Dost vaunt, and who shall hurl Him from his might ;
And this too not in dark mysterious speech, ⁹⁷⁰
But tell each point out clearly. Give me not,
Prometheus, task of double journey. Zeus
Thou see'st, is not with such words appeased.

Prom. Stately of utterance, full of haughtiness
Thy speech, as fits a messenger of Gods.
Ye yet are young in your new rule, and think
To dwell in painless towers. Have I not Seen two great rulers driven forth from thence ?¹
And now the third, who reigneth, I shall see
In basest, quickest fall. Seem I to thee ⁹⁸⁰
To shrink and quail before these new-made Gods ?
Far, very far from that am I. But thou,
Track once again the path by which thou camest ;
Thou shalt learn nought of what thou askest me.

Herm. It was by such self-will as this before
That thou did'st bring these sufferings on thyself.

Prom. I for my part, be sure, would never change
My evil state for that thy bonds slave's lot.

Herm. To be the bonds slave of this rock, I trow,
Is better than to be Zeus' trusty herald ! ⁹⁹⁰

Prom. So it is meet the insulter to insult.

Herm. Thou waxest proud, 'twould seem, of this thy doom.

Prom. Wax proud ! God grant that I may see my foes
Thus waxing proud, and thee among the rest !

¹ Comp. Agam. 162-6.

PROMETHEUS BOUND

Herm. Dost blame me then for thy calamities?

Prom. In one short sentence—all the Gods I hate,
Who my good turns with evil turns repay.

Herm. Thy words prove thee with no slight madness plagued.

Prom. If to hate foes be madness, mad I am.

Herm. Not one could bear thee wert thou prosperous. 1000

Prom. Ah me!

Herm. That word is all unknown to Zeus.

Prom. Time waxing old can many a lesson teach.

Herm. Yet thou at least hast not true wisdom learnt.

Prom. I had not else addressed a slave like thee.

Herm. Thou wilt say nought the Father asks,
'twould seem.

Prom. Fine debt I owe him, favour to repay.

Herm. Me as a boy thou scornest then, forsooth.

Prom. And art thou not a boy, and sillier far,
If that thou thinkest to learn aught from me?
There is no torture nor device by which 1010
Zeus can impel me to disclose these things
Before these bonds that outrage me be loosed.
Let then the blazing levin-flash be hurled;
With white-winged snow-storm and with earth-born thunders

Let Him disturb and trouble all that is;
Nought of these things shall force me to declare
Whose hand shall drive him from his sovereignty.

Herm. See if thou findest any help in this.

Prom. Long since all this I've seen, and formed my plans. 1020

Herm. O fool, take heart, take heart at last in time,
To form right thoughts for these thy present woes.

Prom. Like one who soothes a wave, thy speech in vain

PROMETHEUS BOUND

Vexes my soul. But deem not thou that I,
Fearing the will of Zeus, shall e'er become
As womanised in mind, or shall entreat
Him whom I greatly loathe, with upturned hand,
In woman's fashion, from these bonds of mine
To set me free. Far, far am I from that.

Herm. It seems that I, saying much, shall speak in vain ;

For thou in nought by prayers art pacified,
Or softened in thy heart, but like a colt 1130
Fresh harnessed, thou dost champ thy bit, and strive,
And fight against the reins. Yet thou art stiff
In weak device ; for self-will, by itself,
In one who is not wise, is less than nought.
Look to it, if thou disobey my words,
How great a storm and triple wave of ills,¹
Not to be 'scaped, shall come on thee ; for first,
With thunder and the levin's blazing flash
The Father this ravine of rock shall crush,
And shall thy carcase hide, and stern embrace
Of stony arms shall keep thee in thy place. 1040
And having traversed space of time full long,
Thou shalt come back to light, and then his hound,
The winged hound of Zeus, the ravening eagle,
Shall greedily make banquet of thy flesh,
Coming all day an uninvited guest,
And glut himself upon thy liver dark.
And of that anguish look not for the end,
Before some God shall come to bear thy woes,
And will to pass to Hades' sunless realm,

¹ Either a mere epithet of intensity, as in our " thrice blest," or rising from the supposed fact that every third wave was larger and more impetuous than the others, like the fluctus decumanus of the Latins, or from the sequence of three great waves which some have noted as a common phenomenon in storms.

And the dark cloudy depths of Tartaros.¹ 1050
Wherefore take heed. No feigned boast is this,
But spoken all too truly ; for the lips
Of Zeus know not to speak a lying speech,
But will perform each single word. And thou,
Search well, be wise, nor think that self-willed pride
Shall ever better prove than counsel good.

Chor. To us doth Hermes seem to utter words
Not out of season ; for he bids thee quit
Thy self-willed pride and seek for counsel good.
Hearken thou to him. To the wise of soul
It is foul shame to sin persistently. 1060

Prom. To me who knew it all
He hath this message borne ;
And that a foe from foes
Should suffer is not strange.
Therefore on me be hurled
The sharp-edged wreath of fire ;
And let heaven's vault be stirred
With thunder and the blasts
Of fiercest winds ; and Earth
From its foundations strong,
E'en to its deepest roots,
Let storm-wind make to rock ;
And let the Ocean wave,
With wild and foaming surge,
Be heaped up to the paths 1070
Where move the stars of heaven ;
And to dark Tartaros
Let Him my carcase hurl,

¹ Here again we have a strange shadowing forth of the mystery of Atonement, and what we have learnt to call "vicarious" satisfaction. In the later legend, Cheiron, suffering from the agony of his wounds, resigns his immortality, and submits to die in place of the ever-living death to which Prometheus was doomed.

Herm. Such words and thoughts from one
Brain-stricken one may hear.
What space divides his state
From frenzy ? What repose
Hath he from maddened rage ?
But ye who pitying stand
And share his bitter griefs,
Quickly from hence depart,
Lest the relentless roar
Of thunder stun your soul.

Chor. With other words attempt
To counsel and persuade,
And I will hear : for now
Thou hast this word thrust in
That we may never bear.
How dost thou bid me train
My soul to baseness vile ?
With him I will endure
Whatever is decreed.
Traitors I've learnt to hate,
Nor is there any plague
That more than this I loathe.

Herm. Nay then, remember ye
What now I say, nor blame
Your fortune : never say
That Zeus hath cast you down
To evil not foreseen.
Not so ; ye cast yourselves :
For now with open eyes,
Not taken unawares,
In Atë's endless net
Ye shall entangled be
By folly of your own.

Prom. Yea, now in very deed,
No more in word alone,
The earth shakes to and fro,
And the loud thunder's voice
Bellows hard by, and blaze
The flashing levin-fires ;
And tempests whirl the dust,
And gusts of all wild winds
On one another leap,
In wild conflicting blasts,
And sky with sea is blent :
Such is the storm from Zeus
That comes as working fear,
In terrors manifest.
O Mother venerable !
O Æther ! rolling round
The common light of all,
See'st thou what wrongs I bear ?

1110.

¹ It is noticeable that both Æschylos and Sophocles have left us tragedies which end in a thunderstorm as an element of effect. But the contrast between the Prometheus and the Œdipus at Colonus as to the impression left in the one case of serene reconciliation, and in the other of violent antagonism, is hardly less striking than the resemblance in the outward phenomena which are common to the two.

DRAMATIS PERSONÆ

DANAOS	PELASGOS, king of Argos
Herald	Chorus of the daughters of DANAOS

ARGUMENT.—When Io, after many wanderings, had found refuge in Egypt, and having been touched by Zeus, had given birth to Epaphos, it came to pass that he and his descendants ruled over the region of Canópos, near one of the seven mouths of Neilos. And in the fifth generation there were two brothers, Danaos and Ægyptos, the sons of Belos, and the former had fifty daughters and the latter fifty sons, and Ægyptos sought the daughters of Danaos in marriage for his sons. And they, looking on the marriage as unholy, and hating those who wooed them, took flight and came to Argos, where Pelasgos then ruled as king, as to the land whence Io, from whom they sprang, had come. And thither the sons of Ægyptos followed them in hot pursuit.

their hands, and fillets of white wool twisted round them, chanting as they move in procession to take up their position round the thymele*

Zeus, the God of Suppliants, kindly
Look on this our band of wanderers,
That from banks at mouths of Neilos,
Banks of finest sand, departed!²
Yea, we left the region sacred,
Grassy plain on Syria's borders,³
Not for guilt of blood to exile
By our country's edict sentenced,
But with free choice, loathing wedlock,
Fleeing marriage-rites unholy
With the children of Ægyptos.
And our father Danaos, ruler,
Chief of council, chief of squadrons,

¹ The daughters of Danaos are always represented as fifty in number. It seems probable, however, that the vocal chorus was limited to twelve, the others appearing as mutes.

Playing moves on fortune's draught-board,¹
 Chose what seemed the best of evils,
 Through the salt sea-waves to hasten,
 Steering to the land of Argos,
 Whence our race has risen to greatness;
 Sprung, so boasts it, from the heifer
 Whom the stinging gadfly harassed,
 By the touch of Zeus love-breathing:²
 And to what land more propitious
 Could we come than this before us,
 Holding in our hand the branches
 Suppliant, wreathed with white wool fillets?
 O State! O land! O water gleaming!
 Ye the high Gods, ye the awful,
 In the dark the graves still guarding;
 Thou too with them, Zeus Preserver,³
 Guardian of the just man's dwelling,
 Welcome with the breath of pity,
 Pity as from these shores wafted,
 Us poor women who are suppliants.
 And that swarm of men that follow,
 Haughty offspring of Ægyptos,
 Ere they set their foot among you
 On this silt-strown shore,⁴—oh, send them

¹ Elsewhere in Æschylos (Agam. 33, Fr. 132) we trace allusion to games played with dice. Here we have a reference to one, the details of which are not accurately known to us, but which seems to have been analogous to draughts or chess.

² See the whole story, given as in prophecy, in the Prometheus, v. 865-880.

³ The invocation is addressed—(1) to the Olympian Gods in the brightness of heaven; (2) to the Chthonian deities in the darkness below the earth; (3) to Zeus, the preserver, as the supreme Lord of both.

⁴ An Athenian audience would probably recognise in this a description of the swampy meadows near the coast of Lerna.

Seaward in their ship swift-rowing ;
There, with whirlwind tempest-driven,
There, with lightning and with thunder,
There, with blasts that bring the storm-rain,
May they in the fierce sea perish,
Ere they, cousin-brides possessing,
Rest on marriage-beds reluctant,
Which the voice of right denies them !

STROPHE I

And now I call on him, the Zeus-sprung steer,¹ 40
Our true protector, far beyond the sea,
Child of the heifer-foundress of our line,
Who cropped the flowery mead,
Born of the breath, and named from touch of Zeus.
* And lo ! the destined time
* Wrought fully with the name,
And she brought forth the "Touch-born," Epaphos.

ANTISTROPHE I

And now invoking him in grassy fields, 50
Where erst his mother strayed, to dwellers here
Telling the tale of all her woes of old,
I surest pledge shall give ;
And others, strange beyond all fancy's dream,
Shall yet perchance be found ;
And in due course of time
Shall men know clearly all our history.

The descendants of Io had come to the very spot where the tragic history of their ancestors had had its origin.

¹ The invocation passes on to Epaphos, as a guardian deity, able and willing to succour his afflicted children.

STROPHE II

And if some augur of the land be near,

ANTISTROPHE II

*For she, driven back from wonted haunts and streams,²
Mourns with a strange new plaint
The home that she has lost,
And wails her son's sad doom,
How he at her hand died,
Meeting with evil wrath unmotherly ;

STROPHE III

E'en so do I, to wailing all o'er-given,
In plaintive music of Ionian mood,³
*Vex the soft cheek on Neilos' banks that bloomed,
And heart that bursts in tears,
And pluck the flowers of lamentations loud,
Not without fear of friends, 70
*Lest none should care to help
This flight of mine from that mist-shrouded shore.

ANTISTROPHE III

But, O ye Gods ancestral ! hear my prayer,
Look well upon the justice of our cause,

² "Streams," as flowing through the shady solitude of the groves which the nightingale frequented.

³ "Ionian," as soft and elegiac, in contrast with the more military character of Dorian music.

THE SUPPLIANTS

Nor grant to youth to gain its full desire
 Against the laws of right,
But with prompt hate of lust, our marriage bless.
 *Even for those who come
 As fugitives in war
The altar serves as shield that Gods regard.

STROPHE IV

May God good issue give ! ¹ 81
And yet the will of Zeus is hard to scan :
 • Through all it brightly gleams,
E'en though in darkness and the gloom of chance
 For us poor mortals wrapt.

ANTISTROPHE IV

Safe, by no fall tripped up,
The full-wrought deed decreed by brow of Zeus ;
 For dark with shadows stretch
The pathways of the counsels of his heart,
And difficult to see.

STROPHE V

And from high-towering hopes He hurleth down 90
To utter doom the heir of mortal birth ;
 Yet sets He in array
 No forces violent ;
All that Gods work is effortless and calm :
 Seated on holiest throne,
 Thence, though we know not how,
 He works His perfect will.

¹ In the Greek the paronomasia turns upon the supposed etymological connection between θεός and τιθίμι. I have here, as elsewhere, attempted an analogous rather than identical jeu de mots.

THE SUPPLIANTS

ANTISTROPHE V

Ah, let him look on frail man's wanton pride,
With which the old stock burgeons out anew,
 By love for me constrained,
 In counsels ill and rash, 100
And in its frenzied, passionate resolve
 Finds goad it cannot shun ;
 But in deceived hopes,
 Shall know, too late, its woe.

STROPHE VI

Such bitter griefs, lamenting, I recount,
 With cries shrill, tearful, deep,
 (Ah woe ! ah woe !)
That strike the ear with mourner's woe-fraught cry.
Though yet alive, I wail mine obsequies ;
 Thee, Apian sea-girt bluff,¹
 I greet (our alien speech
 Thou knowest well, O land,) 110
And ofttimes fall, with rendings passionate,
On robe of linen and Sidonian veil.

ANTISTROPHE VI

But to the Gods, for all things prospering well,
 When death is kept aloof,
 Gifts votive come of right.
 Ah woe ! Ah woe !
Oh, troubles dark, and hard to understand !

¹ The Greek word which I have translated " bluff " was one not familiar to Attic ears, and was believed to be of Kyrenean origin. Æschylos accordingly puts it into the lips of the daughters of Danaos, as characteristic more or less of the " alien speech " of the land from which they came.

THE SUPPLIANTS

Ah, whither will these waters carry me?
Thee, Apian sea-girt bluff,
I greet (our alien speech
Thou knowest well, O land,)
And ofttimes fall, with rendings passionate,
On robe of linen and Sidonian veil.

STROPHE VII

The oar indeed and dwelling, timber-wrought,
With sails of canvas, 'gainst the salt sea proof
• Brought me with favouring gales,
By stormy wind unvexed;
Nor have I cause for murmur. Issues good
May He, the all-seeing Father, grant, that I,
Great seed of Mother dread,
In time may 'scape, still maiden undefiled,
My suitor's marriage-bed.

180

ANTISTROPHE VII

And with a will that meets my will may She,
The unstained child of Zeus, on me look down,
*Our Artemis, who guards
The consecrated walls;
And with all strength, though hunted down, uncaught,
May She, the Virgin, me a virgin free,
Great seed of Mother dread,
That I may 'scape, still maiden undefiled,
My suitor's marriage-bed.

THE SUPPLIANTS

Will with our suppliant branches go to him,
Zeus, sovereign of the dead,¹
The Lord that welcomes all that come to him,
Dying by twisted noose 180
If we the grace of Gods Olympian miss.
By thine ire, Zeus, 'gainst Io virulent,
The Gods' wrath seeks us out,
And I know well the woe
Comes from thy queen who reigns in heaven victorious ;
For after stormy wind
The tempest needs must rage.

ANTISTROPHE VIII

And then shall Zeus to words
Unseemly be exposed,
Having the heifer's offspring put to shame, 180
Whom he himself begat.
And now his face averting from our prayers :
Ah, may he hear on high,
Yea, pitying look and hear propitiously !
By thine ire, Zeus, 'gainst Io virulent,
The Gods' wrath seeks us out,
And I know well the woe
Comes from thy queen, who reigns in heaven victorious ;
For after stormy wind 170
The tempest needs must rage,
Danaos. My children, we need wisdom ; lo ! ye came
With me, your father wise and old and true,
As guardian of your voyage. Now ashore,
With forethought true I bid you keep my words,

¹ So in v. 235 Danaos speaks of the "second Zeus" who sits as Judge in Hades. The feeling to which the Chorus gives utterance is that of—

"Flectere si nequeo superos, Acheronta movebo."

THE SUPPLIANTS

As in a tablet-book recording them :
I see a dust, an army's voiceless herald,
Nor are the axles silent as they turn ;
And I descry a host that bear the shield,
And those that hurl the javelin, marching on
With horses and with curvèd battle-cars.
Perchance they are the princes of this land,
Come on the watch, as having news of us ;
But whether one in kindly mood, or hot
With anger fierce, leads on this great array,
It is, my children, best on all accounts
To take your stand hard by this hill of Gods
Who rule o'er conflicts.¹ Better far than towers
Are altars, yea, a shield impenetrable.
But with all speed approach the shrine of Zeus,
The God of mercy, in your left hand holding
The suppliants' boughs wool-wreathed, in solemn guise,²
And greet our hosts as it is meet for us,
Coming as strangers, with all duteous words
Kindly and holy, telling them your tale
Of this your flight, unstained by guilt of blood ;
And with your speech, let mood not over-bold,
Nor vain nor wanton, shine from modest brow
And calm, clear eye. And be not prompt to speak,
Nor full of words ; the race that dwelleth here
Of this is very jealous :³ and be mindful
Much to concede ; a fugitive thou art,

¹ Some mound dedicated to the Gods, with one or more altars and statues of the Gods on it, is on the stage, and the suppliants are told to take up their places there. The Gods of conflict who are named below, Zeus, Apollo, Poseidon, presided generally over the three great games of Greece. Hermes is added to the list.

² Comp. Libation-Pourers, 1024, Eumen. 44.

³ The Argives are supposed to share the love of brevity which we commonly connect with their neighbours the Laconians.

A stranger and in want, and 'tis not meet
That those in low estate high words should speak.

Chor. My father, to the prudent prudently 200
Thou speakest, and my task shall be to keep

Dan. Yea, may He look with favourable eye!

Chor. I fain would take my seat not far from thee.

[Chorus moves to the altar not far from

DANAOS

Dan. Delay not then ; success go with your plan.

Chor. Zeus, pity us with sorrow all but crushed!

Dan. If He be willing, all shall turn out well.

Chor.

Dan. Invoke ye now the mighty bird of Zeus.¹

Chor. We call the sun's bright rays to succour us.

Dau. Apollo too, the holy, in that He, 210

A God, has tasted exile from high heaven.²

Chor. Knowing that fate, He well may feel for men.

Dan. So may He feel, and look on us benignly!

Chor. Whom of the Gods shall I besides invoke?

Dan. I see this trident here, a God's great symbol.³

Chor. Well hath He brought us, well may He receive!

Dan. Here too is Hermes,⁴ as the Hellenes know him.

¹ The "mighty bird of Zeus" seems here, from the answer of the Chorus, to mean not the "eagle" but the "sun," which roused men from their sleep as the cock did, so that "cock-crow" and "sunrise" were synonymous. It is, in any case, striking that Zeus, rather than Apollo, appears as the Sun-God.

² The words refer to the myth of Apollo's banishment from heaven and servitude under Admetos.

⁴ The Hellenic Hermes is distinguished from his Egyptian counterpart, Thoth, as being different in form and accessories.

THE SUPPLIANTS

Chor. To us, as free, let Him good herald prove.

Dan. Yea, and the common shrine of all these Gods
Adore ye, and in holy precincts sit,
Like swarms of doves in fear of kites your kinsmen, ²²⁰
Foes of our blood, polluters of our race.
How can bird prey on bird and yet be pure?
And how can he be pure who seeks in marriage
Unwilling bride from father too unwilling?
Nay, not in Hades' self, shall he, vain fool,
Though dead, 'scape sentence, doing deeds like this;
For there, as men relate, a second Zeus¹
Judges men's evil deeds, and to the dead
Assigns their last great penalties. Look up,
And take your station here, that this your cause
May win its way to a victorious end.

Enter the KING on his chariot, followed by Attendants

King. Whence comes this crowd, this non-Hellenic band, 230
In robes and raiment of barbaric fashion
So gorgeously attired, whom now we speak to?
This woman's dress is not of Argive mode,
Nor from the climes of Hellas. How ye dared,
Without a herald even or protector,
Yea, and devoid of guides too, to come hither
Thus boldly, is to me most wonderful.
And yet these boughs, as is the suppliant's wont,
Are set by you before the Gods of conflicts:
By this alone will Hellas guess aright.
Much more indeed we might have else conjectured, ²⁴⁰
Were there no voice to tell me on the spot.

Chor. Not false this speech of thine about our garb;

¹ A possible reference to the Egyptian Osiris, as lord or judge of Hades. Comp. v. 145.

THE SUPPLIANTS

But shall I greet thee as a citizen,
Or bearing Hermes' rod, or city ruling?¹

King. Nay, for that matter, answer thou and speak
Without alarm. Palæchthon's son am I,
Earth-born, the king of this Pelasgic land;
And named from me, their king,² as well might be,
The race Pelasgic reaps our country's fruits;
*And all the land through which the Strymon pours ²⁵⁰
Its pure, clear waters to the West I rule;
And as the limits of my realm I mark
The land of the Perrhæbi, and the climes
Near the Pæonians, on the farther side
Of Pindos, and the Dodonæan heights;³
And the sea's waters form its bounds. O'er all Within these coasts I govern; and this plain,
The Apian land, itself has gained its name
Long since from one who as a healer lived;⁴
For Apis, coming from Naupactian land
That lies beyond the straits, Apollo's⁵ son,
Prophet and healer, frees this land of ours ²⁶⁰
From man-destroying monsters, which the soil,
Polluted with the guilt of blood of old,
By anger of the Gods, brought forth,—fierce plagues,

¹ "Shall I," the Chorus asks, "speak to you as a private citizen, or as a herald, or as a king?"

² It would appear from this that the king himself bore the name Pelasgos. In some versions of the story he is so designated.

³ The lines contain a tradition of the wide extent of the old Pelasgic rule, including Thessalia, or the Pelasgic Argos, between the mouths of Peneus and Pindos, Perrhæbia, Dodona, and finally the Apian land or Peloponnesos.

⁴ The true meaning of the word "Apian," as applied to the Peloponnesos, seems to have been "distant." Here the myth is followed which represented it as connected with Apis the son of Telchin (son of Apollo, in the sense of being a physician-prophet), who had freed the land from monsters.

THE SUPPLIANTS

The dragon-brood's dread, unblest company ;
And Apis, having for this Argive land
Duly wrought out his saving surgery,
Gained his reward, remembered in our prayers ;
And thou, this witness having at my hands,
May'st tell thy race at once, and further speak ;
Yet lengthened speech our city loveth not?

Chor. Full short and clear our tale. We boast that we Are Argives in descent, the children true 270
Of the fair, fruitful heifer. And all this Will I by what I speak show firm and true.

• King. Nay, strangers, what ye tell is past belief
For me to hear, that ye from Argos spring ;
For ye to Libyan women are most like,¹
And nowise to our native maidens here.
Such race might Neilos breed, and Kyprian mould,
Like yours, is stamped by skilled artificers
On women's features ; and I hear that those
Of India travel upon camels borne, 280
Swift as the horse, yet trained as sumpter-mules,
E'en those who as the Æthiops' neighbours dwell.
And had ye borne the bow, I should have guessed,
Undoubting, ye were of th' Amázon's tribe,
Man-hating, flesh-devouring. Taught by you,
I might the better know how this can be,
That your descent and birth from Argos come.

Chor. They tell of one who bore the temple-keys
Of Hera, Io, in this Argive land.

King. So was't indeed, and wide the fame prevails :
And was it said that Zeus a mortal loved ? 290

Chor. And that embrace was not from Hera hid.

¹ The description would seem to indicate—(1) that the daughter of Danaos appeared on the stage as of swarthy complexion ; and (2) that Indians, Æthiopians, Kyprians, and Amazons, were all thought of as in this respect alike.

THE SUPPLIANTS

King. What end had then these strifes of sovereign Ones ?

Chor. The Argive goddess made the maid a heifer.

King. Did Zeus that fair-horned heifer still approach ?

Chor. So say they, fashioned like a wooing steer.

King. How acted then the mighty spouse of Zeus ?

Chor. She o'er the heifer set a guard all-seeing.

King. What herdsman strange, all-seeing, speak'st thou of ?

Chor. Argos, the earth-born, him whom Hermes slew. coo

King. What else then wrought she on the ill-starred heifer ?

Chor. She sent a stinging gadfly to torment her.

[Those who near Neilos dwell an æstros call it.]

King. Did she then drive her from her country far ?

Chor. All that thou say'st agrees well with our tale.

King. And did she to Canôbos go, and Memphis ?

Chor. Zeus with his touch, an offspring then begets.

King. What Zeus-born calf that heifer claims as mother ?

Chor. *He from that touch which freed named Epaphos.
310

King. [What offspring then did Epaphos beget ?]¹

Chor. Libya, that gains her fame from greatest land.

King. What other offspring, born of her, dost tell of ?

Chor. Sire of my sire here, Belos, with two sons.

King. Tell me then now the name of yonder sage.

Chor. Danaos, whose brother boasts of fifty sons.

King. Tell me his name, too, with ungrudging speech.

¹ The line is conjectural, but some question of this kind is implied in the answer of the Chorus.

THE SUPPLIANTS

Chor. Ægyptos : knowing now our ancient stock,
Take heed thou bid thine Argive suppliants rise.

King. Ye seem, indeed, to make your ancient claim
To this our country good : but how came ye ³²⁰
To leave your father's house ? What chance constrained you ?

Chor. O king of the Pelasgi, manifold
Are ills of mortals, and thou could'st not find
The self-same form of evil anywhere.
Who would have said that this unlooked-for flight
Would bring to Argos race once native here,
Driving them forth in hate of wedlock's couch ?

King. What seek'st thou then of these the Gods of conflicts,
Holding your wool-wreathed branches newly-plucked ?

Chor. That I serve not Ægyptos' sons as slave.

King. Speak'st thou of some old feud, or breach of right ? ³³⁰

Chor. Nay, who'd find fault with master that one loved ?

King. Yet thus it is that mortals grow in strength.¹

Chor. True ; when men fail, 'tis easy to desert them.

King. How then to you may I act reverently ?

Chor. Yield us not up unto Ægyptos' sons.

King. Hard boon thou ask'st, to wage so strange a war.

Chor. Nay, justice champions those who fight with her.

King. Yes, if her hand was² in it from the first.

Chor. Yet reverence thou the state-ship's stern thus wreathed.³

¹ By sacrificing personal likings to schemes of ambition, men and women contract marriages which increase their power.

² The Gods of conflict are the pilots of the ship of the State. The altar dedicated to them is as its stern : the garlands and

THE SUPPLIANTS

King. I tremble as I see these seats thus shadowed. 340

STROPHE I

Chor. Dread is the wrath of Zeus, the God of suppliants :

Son of Palæchthon, hear ;
Hear, O Pelasgic king, with kindly heart.
Behold me suppliant, exile, wanderer,

*Like heifer chased by wolves
Upon the lofty crags,
Where, trusting in her strength,
She lifteth up her voice

And to the shepherd tells her tale of grief.

King. I see, o'ershadowed with the new-plucked boughs,

*Bent low, a band these Gods of conflict own ;
And may our dealings with these home-sprung strangers 350

Be without peril, nor let strife arise
To this our country for unlooked-for chance
And unprovided ! This our State wants not.

ANTISTROPHE I

Chor. Yea, may that Law that guards the suppliant's right

Free this our flight from harm,
Law, sprung from Zeus, supreme Apportioner,
But thou, [to the King,] though old, from me, though younger, learn :

If thou a suppliant pity
Thou ne'er shalt penury know,
So long as Gods receive wands of suppliants which adorn it are as the decorations of the vessels.

THE SUPPLIANTS

Within their sacred shrines
Gifts at the hands of worshipper unstained.

King. It is not at my hearth ye suppliant sit ;
But if the State be as a whole defiled, 360
Be it the people's task to work the cure.
I cannot pledge my promise to you first
Ere I have counselled with my citizens.¹

STROPHE II

Chor. Thou art the State—yea, thou the commonwealth,
Chief lord whom none may judge ;
'Tis thine to rule the country's altar-hearth,
With the sole vote of thy prevailing nod ;
And thou on throne of state,
Sole-sceptred in thy sway,
Bringest each matter to its destined end ;
Shun thou the curse of guilt.

King. Upon my foes rest that dread curse of guilt ! 370
Yet without harm I cannot succour you,
Nor gives it pleasure to reject your prayers.
In a sore strait am I ; fear fills my soul
To take the chance, to do or not to do.

ANTISTROPHE II

Chor. Look thou on Him who looks on all from heaven,
Guardian of suffering men
Who, worn with toil, unto their neighbours come

¹ Some editors have seen in this an attempt to enlist the constitutional sympathies of an Athenian audience in favour of the Argive king, who will not act without consulting his assembly. There seems more reason to think that the aim of the dramatist was in precisely the opposite direction, and that the words which follow set forth his admiration for the king who can act, as compared with one who is tied and hampered by restrictions.

THE SUPPLIANTS

As suppliants, and receive not justice due :

For these the wrath of Zeus,

Zeus, the true suppliant's God,

Abides, by wail of sufferer unappeased.

320

King. Yet if Ægyptos' sons have claim on thee
By their State's law, asserting that they come
As next of kin, who dare oppose their right ?
Thou must needs plead that by thy laws at home
They over thee have no authority.¹

STROPHE III

Chor. Ah ! may I ne'er be captive to the might
Of males ! Where'er the stars
Are seen in heaven, I track my way in flight,
As refuge from a marriage that I hate.

But thou, make Right thy friend,
And honour what the Gods count pure and true.

330

King. Hard is the judgment : choose not me as judge.
But, as I said before, I may not act
Without the people, sovereign though I be,
Lest the crowd say, should aught fall out amiss,
"In honouring strangers, thou the State did'st ruin."

ANTISTROPHE III

Chor. Zeus, the great God of kindred, in these things
Watches o'er both of us,

¹ By an Attic law, analogous in principle to that of the Jews, (Num. xxxvi. 8; 1 Chron. xxiii. 22), heiresses were absolutely bound to marry their next of kin, if he claimed his right. The king at once asserts this as the law which was prima facie applicable to the case, and declares himself ready to surrender it if the petitioners can show that their own municipal law is on the other side. He will not thrust his country's customs upon foreigners, who can prove that they live under a different rule, but in the absence of evidence must act on the law which he is bound officially to recognise.

THE SUPPLIANTS

Holding an equal scale, and fitly giving
To the base evil, to the righteous blessing.

Why, when these things are set
In even balance, fear'st thou to do right? 400

King. Deep thought we need that brings deliverance,
That, like a diver, mine eye too may plunge
Clear-seeing to the depths, not wine-bedrenched,
That these things may be harmless to the State,
And to ourselves may issue favourably:
That neither may the strife make you its prey,
Nor that we give you up, who thus are set
Near holy seat of Gods, and so bring in
To dwell with us the Avenger terrible,
God that destroyeth, who not e'en in Hades 410
Gives freedom to the dead. Say, think ye not
That there is need of counsel strong to save?

STROPHE I

Chor. Take heed to it, and be
Friend to the stranger wholly faithful found;
Desert not thou the poor,
Driven from afar by godless violence.

ANTISTROPHE I

See me not dragged away,
O thou that rul'st the land! from seat of Gods:
Know thou men's wanton pride, 420
And guard thyself against the wrath of Zeus.

STROPHE II

Endure not thou to see thy suppliant,
Despite of law, torn off,
As horses by their frontlets, from the forms
Of sculptured deities,

THE SUPPLIANTS

Nor yet the outrage of their wanton hands,
Seizing these brodered robes.

ANTISTROPHE II

For know thou well, whichever course thou take,
Thy sons and all thy house
*Must pay in war the debt that Justice claims,
Proportionate in kind. 430

Lay well to heart these edicts, wise and true,
Given by great Zeus himself.

King. Well then have I thought o'er it. To this⁺ point

Our ship's course drives. Fierce war we needs must risk Either with these (pointing to the Gods) or those. Set fast and firm

Is this as is the ship tight wedged in stocks ;
And without trouble there's no issue out.
For wealth indeed, were our homes spoiled of that,
There might come other, thanks to Zeus the Giver,
More than the loss, and filling up the freight ; 440
And if the tongue should aim its adverse darts,
Baleful and over-stimulant of wrath,
There might be words those words to heal and soothe.
But how to blot the guilt of kindred blood,
This needs a great atonement—many victims
Falling to many Gods—to heal the woe.

*I take my part, and turn aside from strife ;
And I far rather would be ignorant
Than wise, forecasting evil. May the end,
Against my judgment, show itself as good !

Chor. Hear, then, the last of all our pleas for pity.

King. I hear ; speak on. It shall not 'scape my heed. 450

Chor. Girdles I have, and zones that bind my robes.

King.* Such things are fitting for a woman's state.

THE SUPPLIANTS

Chor. With these then, know, as good and rare device

King. Nay, speak. What word is this thou'lt utter now ?

Chor. Unless thou giv'st our band thy plighted word

King. What wilt thou do with this device of girdles ?

Chor. With tablets new these sculptures we'll adorn.

King. Thou speak'st a riddle. Make thy meaning • plain.

Chor. Upon these Gods we'll hang ourselves at once.

• King. I hear a word which pierces to the heart. ⁴⁶⁰

Chor. Thou see'st our meaning. Eyes full clear
I've given.

King. Lo then ! in many ways sore troubles come.
A host of evils rushes like a flood ;
A sea of woe none traverse, fathomless, •
'This have I entered ; haven there is none.
For if I fail to do this work for you,
'Thou tellest of defilement unsurpassed ;¹
And if for thee against Ægyptos' sons,
'Thy kindred, I before my city's walls
In conflict stand, how can there fail to be
A bitter loss, to stain the earth with blood 470
Of man for woman's sake ? And yet I needs
Must fear the wrath of Zeus, the suppliant's God ;
That dread is mightiest with the sons of men.
Thou, then, O aged father of these maidens !
Taking forthwith these branches in thine arms,
Lay them on other altars of the Gods
Our country worships, that the citizens
May all behold this token of thy coming,

¹ Sc., the pollution which the statues of the Gods would contract if they carried into execution their threat of suicide.

THE SUPPLIANTS

And about me let no rash speech be dropped ;
For 'tis a people prompt to blame their rulers.
And then perchance some one beholding them, 480
And pitying, may wax wrathful 'gainst the outrage
Of that male troop, and with more kindly will
The people look on you ; for evermore
Men all wish well unto the weaker side.

Dan. This boon is counted by us of great price,
To find a patron proved so merciful.
And thou, send with us guides to lead us on,
And tell us how before their shrines to find
The altars of the Gods that guard the State, *
*And holy places columned round about ;
And safety for us, as the town we traverse.
Not of like fashion is our features' stamp ; 490
For Neilos rears not race like Inachos.¹
Take heed lest rashness lead to bloodshed here ;
Ere now, unknowing, men have slain their friends.

King (to Attendants). Go then, my*men ; full well the stranger speaks ;
And lead him where the city's altars stand,
The seats of Gods ; and see ye talk not much
To passers-by as ye this traveller lead,
A suppliant at the altar-hearth of Gods.

[Exeunt DANAOS and Attendants]

Chor. Thou speak'st to him ; and may he go as bidden !

But what shall I do ? What hope giv'st thou me ?

King. Leave here those boughs, the token of your grief. 500

Chor. Lo ! here I leave them at thy beck and word.

¹ Inachos, the river-God of Argos, and as such contrasted with Neilos.

THE SUPPLIANTS

King. Now turn thy steps towards this open lawn.

Chor. What shelter gives a lawn unconsecrate ?¹

King. We will not yield thee up to birds of prey.

Chor. Nay, but to foes far worse than fiercest dragons.

King. Good words should come from those who good have heard.

Chor. No wonder they wax hot whom fear enthral.

King. But dread is still for rulers all unmeet.

Chor. Do thou then cheer our soul by words and deeds.

King. Nay, no long time thy sire will leave thee lorn ; 510

And I, all people of the land convening,
Will the great mass persuade to kindly words ;
And I will teach thy father what to say.
Wherefore remain and ask our country's Gods,
With suppliant prayers, to grant thy soul's desire,
And I will go in furtherance of thy wish :
Sweet Suasion follow us, and Fortune good ! [Exit

STROPHE I

Chor. O King of kings ! and blest
Above all blessed ones,
And Power most mighty of the mightiest !
O Zeus, of high estate ! 520
Hear thou and grant our prayer !
Drive thou far off the wantonness of men,
The pride thou hatest sore,

¹ i.e., "Unconsecrate," marked out by no barriers, accessible to all, and therefore seeming to offer but little prospect of a safe asylum. The place described seems to have been an open piece of turf rather than a grove of trees.

THE SUPPLIANTS

And in the pool of darkling purple hue
Plunge thou the woe that comes in swarthy barque.

ANTISTROPHE I

Look on the women's cause ;
Recall the ancient tale,
Of one whom Thou did'st love in time of old,
The mother of our race :
Remember it, O Thou
Who did'st on Io lay thy mystic touch.
We boast that we are come
Of consecrated land the habitants, 430
And from this land by lineage high descended.

STROPHE II

Now to the ancient track,
Our mother's, I have passed,
The flowery meadow-land where she was watched,—
The pastures of the herd,
Whence Io, by the stinging gadfly driven,
Flees, of her sense bereft,
Passing through many tribes of mortal men ;
And then by Fate's decree
Crossing the billowy straits,
On either side she leaves a continent.¹ 540

ANTISTROPHE II

Now through the Asian land
She hastens o'er and o'er,
Right through the Phrygian fields where feed the flocks ;
And passes Teuthras' fort,

¹ Comp. the narrative as given in Prometheus Bound, vv. 660, et seq.

THE SUPPLIANTS

Owned by the Mysians,¹ and the Lydian plains ;
 And o'er Kilikian hills,
And those of far Pamphylia rushing on,
 By ever-flowing streams,
 On to the deep, rich lands,
And Aphrodite's home in wheat o'erflowing.²

STROPHE III

And so she cometh, as that herdsman winged 550
 Pierces with sharpest sting,
To holy plain all forms of life sustaining,
 Fields that are fed from snows,³
Which Typhon's monstrous strength has traversed,⁴
 And unto Neilos' streams,
 By sickly taint untouched,⁵
Still maddened with her toil of ignominy,
By torturing stings driven on, great Hera's frenzied slave.

¹ Teuthras' fort, or Teuthrania, is described by Strabo (xii. p. 571) as lying between the Hellespont and Mount Sipylus, in Magnesia.

² Kypros, as dedicated to the worship of Aphrodite, and famous for its wine, and oil, and corn.

⁴ Typhon, the mythical embodiment of the power of evil, was fabled to have wandered over Egypt, seeking the body of Osiris. Isis, to baffle him, placed coffins in all parts of Egypt, all empty but the one which contained the body.

⁵ The fame of the Nile for the purity of its water, after the earthy matter held in solution had been deposited, seems to have been as great in the earliest periods of its history as it is now.

THE SUPPLIANTS

ANTISTROPHE III

And those who then the lands inhabited,
 Quivered with pallid fear, 560
That filled their soul at that unwonted marvel,
 Seeing that monstrous shape,
 The human joined with brute,
Half heifer, and half form of woman fair : ¹
 And sore amazed were they.
 Who was it then that soothed
Poor Io, wandering in her sore affright,
Driven on, and ever on, by gadfly's maddening sting ?

STROPHE IV

 Zeus, Lord of endless time
 [Was seen All-working then ;]
He, even He, for by his sovereign might
That works no ill, was she from evil freed ; 570
 And by his breath divine
She findeth rest, and weeps in floods of tears
 Her sorrowing shame away ;
 And with new burden big,
 Not falsely ' Zeus-born ' named,
She bare a son that grew in faultless growth,

ANTISTROPHE IV

 Prosperous through long, long years ;
And so the whole land shouts with one accord,
" Lo, a race sprung from him, the Lord of life,
 In very deed, Zeus-born ! 580

¹ Io was represented as a woman with a heifer's head, and was probably a symbolic representation of the moon, with her crescent horns. Sometimes the transformation is described (as in v. 294) in words which imply a more thorough change.

THE SUPPLIANTS

Who else had checked the plagues that Hera sent ? ”

 This is the work of Zeus :
 And speaking of our race
 That sprang from Epaphos
As such, thou would'st not fail to hit the mark.

STROPHE V

Which of the Gods could I with right invoke
 As doing juster deeds ?
He is our Father, author of our life,
The King whose right hand worketh all his will,
Our line's great author, in his counsels deep
 Recording things of old,
Directing all his plans, the great work-master, Zeus.

ANTISTROPHE V

For not as subject hastening at the beck
 Of strength above his own,¹
Reigns He subordinate to mightier powers ;
Nor does He pay his homage from below,
While One sits throned in majesty above ;²
 Act is for him as speech,
To hasten what his teeming mind resolves.

Re-enter DANAOS

Dan. Be of good cheer, my children. All goes well
With those who dwell here, and the people's voice
Hath passed decrees full, firm, irrevocable.

¹ Perhaps—

“ For not as subject sitting 'neath the sway
 Of strength above his own.”

² The passage takes its place among the noblest utterances of a faith passing above the popular polytheism to the thought of one sovereign Will ruling and guiding all things, as Will—without effort, in the calmness of a power irresistible.

THE SUPPLIANTS

Chor. Hail, aged sire, that tell'st me right good news !
But say with what intent the vote hath passed,
And on which side the people's hands prevail.

Dan. The Argives have decreed without division,
So that my aged mind grew young again ; 600
For in full congress, with their right hands raised
Rustled the air as they decreed their vote
That we should sojourn in their land as free,
Free from arrest, and with asylum rights ;
And that no native here nor foreigner
Should lead us off ; and, should he venture force,
That every citizen who gave not help 610
Dishonoured should be driven to exile forth.
Such counsel giving, the Pelasgian King 610
Gained their consent, proclaiming that great wrath
Of Zeus the God of suppliants ne'er would let
The city wax in fatness,—warning them
That double guilt¹ upon the State would come,
Touching at once both guests and citizens,
The food and sustenance of sore disease
That none could heal. And then the Argive host,
Hearing these things, decreed by show of hands,
Not waiting for the herald's proclamation,
So it should be. They heard, indeed, the crowd
Of those Pelasgi, all the winning speech,
The well-turned phrases cunning to persuade ;
But it was Zeus that brought the end to pass.

Chor. Come then, come, let us speak for Argives
Prayers that are good for good deeds done ; 620
Zeus, who o'er all strangers watches,
May He regard with his praise and favour

¹ Double, as involving a sin against the laws of hospitality, so far as the suppliants were strangers—a sin against the laws of kindred, so far as they might claim by descent the rights of citizenship.

THE SUPPLIANTS

The praise that comes from the lips of strangers,
*And guide in all to a faultless issue.

STROPHE I

Half-Chor. A. Now, now, at last, ye Gods of Zeus begotten,¹
Hear, as I pour my prayers upon their race,
That ne'er may this Pelasgic city raise
From out its flames the joyless cry of War,
War, that in other fields
Reapeth his human crop:
For they have mercy shown,
And passed their kind decree, 630
Pitying this piteous flock, the suppliants of great Zeus.

ANTISTROPHE I

They did not take their stand with men 'gainst women
Casting dishonour on their plea for help,
*But looked to Him who sees and works from heaven,
*Full hard to war with. Yea, what house could bear
To see Him on its roof
Casting pollution there ?²
Sore vexing there he sits.
Yes, they their kin revere,
Suppliants of holiest Zeus ; 640
Therefore with altars pure shall they the Gods delight.

¹ If, as has been conjectured, the tragedy was written with a view to the alliance between Argos and Athens, made in B.C. 461, this choral ode must have been the centre, if not of the dramatic, at all events of the political interest of the play.

² The image is that of a bird of evil omen, perched upon the roof, and defiling the house, while it uttered its boding cries.

THE SUPPLIANTS

STROPHE II

Therefore from faces by our boughs o'ershadowed¹
Let prayers ascend in emulous eagerness :
 Ne'er may dark pestilence
 This State of men bereave ;
 May no fierce party strife
Pollute these plains with native carcasses ;
 And may the bloom of youth
 Be with them still uncropt ;
And ne'er may Aphrodite's paramour, 650
 Ares the scourge of men,
 Mow down their blossoms fair !

ANTISTROPHE II

And let the altars tended by the old
*Blaze with the gifts of men with hoary hairs ;
 So may the State live on
 In full prosperity !
 Let them great Zeus adore,
The strangers' God, the one Supreme on high,
 By venerable law
 Ordering the course of fate.
And next we pray that ever more and more
 * Earth may her tribute bear,
And Artemis as Hecate preside²
 O'er woman's travail-pangs. 660

STROPHE III

Let no destroying strife¹ come on, invading
This city to lay waste,

¹ The suppliants' boughs, so held as to shade the face from view.

² The name of Hecate connected Artemis as, on the one side, with the unseen world of Hades, so, on the other, with child-birth, and the purifications that followed on it.

THE SUPPLIANTS

Setting in fierce array
War, with its fruit of tears,
Lyreless and danceless all,
And cry of people's wrath ;
And may the swarm of plagues,
Loathly and foul to see,
Abide far off from these our citizens,
And that Lykeian king, may He be found
Benignant to our youth !¹

ANTISTROPHE III

And Zeus, may He, by his supreme decree,
Make the earth yield her fruits
Through all the seasons round,
And grant a plenteous brood
Of herds that roam the fields !
May Heaven all good gifts pour,
And may the voice of song
Ascend o'er altar shrines,
Unmarred by sounds of ill !
And let the voice that loves with lyre to blend
Go forth from lips of blameless holiness,
In accents of great joy !

STROPHE IV

*And may the rule in which the people share
Keep the State's functions as in perfect peace,

¹ The name of Lykeian, originally, perhaps, simply representing Apollo as the God of Light, came afterwards to be associated with the might of destruction (the Wolf-destroyer) and the darts of pestilence and sudden death. The prayer is therefore that he, the Destroyer, may hearken to the suppliants, and spare the people for whom they pray.

THE SUPPLIANTS

E'en that which sways the crowd,
*Which sways the commonwealth, 680
By counsels wise and good ;
And to the strangers and the sojourners
May they grant rights that rest on compacts sure,
Ere War is roused to arms,
So that no trouble come !

ANTISTROPHE IV

And the great Gods who o'er this country watch,
May they adore them in the land They guard,
With rites of sacrifice,
And troops with laurel boughs,
As did our sires of old !
For thus to honour those who gave us life,
This stands as one of three great laws on high,¹
Written as fixed and firm,
The laws of Right revered.
Dan. I praise these seemly prayers, dear children 690 mine.

But fear ye not, if I your father speak
Words that are new, and all unlooked-for by you ;
For from this station to the suppliant given
I see the ship ; too clear to be mistaken
The swelling sails, the bulwark's coverings,
And prow with eyes that scan the onward way,²
But too obedient to the steerman's helm,
Being, as it is, unfriendly. And the men
Who sail in her with swarthy limbs are seen,

¹ The "three great laws" were those ascribed to Triptolemos, "to honour parents, to worship the Gods with the fruits of the earth, to hurt neither man nor beast."

² The Egyptian ships, like those of many other Eastern countries, had eyes (the eyes of Osiris, as they were called) painted on their bows.

THE SUPPLIANTS

In raiment white conspicuous. And I see 700
Full clear the other ships that come to help ;
And this as leader, putting in to shore,
Furling its sails, is rowed with equal stroke.
'Tis yours, with mood of calm and steadfast soul,
To face the fact, and not to slight the Gods.
And I will come with friends and advocates ;
For herald, it may be, or embassy,
May come, and wish to seize and bear you off,
Grasping their prey. But nought of this shall be ;
Fear ye not them. It were well done, however,
If we should linger in our help, this succour 710
In no wise to forget. Take courage then ;
In their own time and at the appointed day,
Whoever slights the Gods shall pay for it.

STROPHE I

Chor. I fear, my father, since the swift-winged ships
Are come, and very short the time that's left.
A shuddering anguish makes me sore afraid,
Lest small the profit of my wandering flight.

I faint, my sire, for fear.

Dan. My children, since the Argives' vote is passed,
Take courage : they will fight for thee, I know. 720

ANTISTROPHE I

Chor. Hateful and wanton are Ægyptos' sons,
Insatiable of conflict, and I speak
To one who knows them. They in timbered ships,
Dark-eyed, have sailed in wrath that hits its mark,
With great and swarthy host.

Dan. Yet many they shall find whose arms are tanned
In the full scorching of the noontide heat.¹

¹ A side-thrust, directed by the poet, who had fought at Marathon, against the growing effeminacy of the Athenian youth,

THE SUPPLIANTS

STROPHE II

Chor. Leave me not here alone, I pray thee, father !
Alone, a woman is as nought, and war
Is not for her. Of over-subtle mind,
And subtle counsel in their souls impure, 730
Like ravens, e'en for altars caring not,—
Such, such in soul are they.

Dan. That would work well indeed for us, my children,
Should they be foes to Gods as unto thee.

ANTISTROPHE II

Chor. No reverence for these tridents or the shrines
Of Gods, my father, will restrain their hands :
Full stout of heart, of godless mood unblest,
Fed to the full, and petulant as dogs,
And for the voice of high Gods caring not,—
Such, such in soul are they. •

Dan. Nay, the tale runs that wolves prevail o'er dogs ; 740
And byblos fruit excels not ear of corn.¹

Chor. But since their minds are as the minds of brutes,
Restless and vain, we must beware of force.

many of whom were learning to shrink from all activity and exposure that might spoil their complexions. Comp Plato, Phaedros, p. 239.

¹ The saying is somewhat dark, but the meaning seems to be that if the "dogs" of Egypt are strong, the "wolves" of Argos are stronger ; that the wheat on which the Hellenes lived gave greater strength to limbs and sinew than the "byblos fruit" on which the Egyptian soldiers and sailors habitually lived. Some writers, however, have seen in the last line, rendered—

"The byblos fruit not always bears full ear," a proverb like the English,

"There's many a slip
'Twixt the cup and the lip." •

THE SUPPLIANTS

Dan. Not rapid is the getting under weigh
Of naval squadron, nor their anchoring,
Nor the safe putting into shore with cables.
Nor have the shepherds of swift ships quick trust
In anchor-fastenings, most of all, as now,
When coming to a country havenless;
And when the sun has yielded to the night,
That night brings travail to a pilot wise, 750
[Though it be calm and all the waves sleep still;]
So neither can this army disembark
Before the ship is safe in anchorage.
And thou beware lest in thy panic fear
Thou slight the Gods whom thou hast called to help.
The city will not blame your messenger,
Old though he be, being young in clear-voiced thought.
Exit

STROPHE I

Chor. Ah, me! thou land of jutting promontory
Which justly all revere,
What lies before us? Where in Apian land
Shall we a refuge find,
If still here be dark hiding anywhere?
Ah! that I were as smoke
That riseth full and black
Nigh to the clouds of Zeus, 760
Or soaring up on high invisible,
Like dust that vanishes,
Pass out of being with no help from wings!

ANTISTROPHE I

*E'en so the ill admits not now of flight;
My heart in dark gloom throbs;
My father's work as watcher brings me low;
I faint for very fear,

THE SUPPLIANTS

And I would fain find noose that bringeth death,
In twisted cordage hung,
Before the man I loathe
Draws near this flesh of mine :
Sooner than that may Hades rule o'er me
Sleeping the sleep of death !

770

STROPHE II

Ah, might I find a place in yon high vault,
Where the rain-clouds are passing into snow,
Or lonely precipice
Whose summit none can see,
Rock where the vulture haunts,
Witness for me of my abysmal fall,
Before the marriage that will pierce my heart
Becomes my dreaded doom !

ANTISTROPHE II

I shrink not from the thought of being the prey
Of dogs and birds that haunt the country round ;
For death shall make me free
From ills all lamentable :
Yea, let death rather come
Than the worse doom of hated marriage-bed !
What other refuge now remains for me
That marriage to avert ?

780

STROPHE III

Yea, to the Gods raise thou
Cloud-piercing, wailing cry
Of songs and litanies,
Prevailing, working freedom out for me :
And thou, O Father, look,
Look down upon the strife,

790

THE SUPPLIANTS

With glance of wrath against our enemies
From eyes that see the right ;
With pity look on us thy suppliants,
O Lord of Earth, O Zeus omnipotent !

ANTISTROPHE III

For lo ! Ægyptos' house,
In pride intolerable,
O'er-masculine in mood,
Pursuing me in many a winding course,
Poor wandering fugitive,
• With loud and wild desires,
Seek in their frenzied violence to seize :
But thine is evermore
The force that turns the balance of the scale :
What comes to mortal men apart from Thee ?

800

Ah ! ah ! ah ! ah !
*Here on the land behold the ravisher
Who comes on us by sea !
*Ah, may'st thou perish, ravisher, ere thou
Hast stopped or landed here !
*I utter cry of wailing loud and long,
*I see them work the prelude of their crimes,
Their crimes of violence.
Ah ! ah ! Ah me !
Haste in your flight for help !
The mighty ones are waxing fat and proud,
By sea and land alike intolerable.
Be thou, O King, our bulwark and defence !

810

Enter Herald of the sons of ÆGYPTOS, advancing to the daughters of DANAOS

Her. Haste, haste with all your speed unto the barque.

THE SUPPLIANTS

Chor. Tearing of hair, yea, tearing now will come,
And print of nails in flesh,
And smiting off of heads,
With murderous stream of blood.

Her. Haste, haste ye, to that barque that yonder lies,
Ye wretches, curse on you.

STROPHE I

Chor. Would thou had'st met thy death
Where the salt waves wildly surge,
Thou with thy lordly pride,
In nail-compacted ship :

*Lo ! they will smite thee, weltering in thy blood, 820
*And drive thee to thy barque.

Her. I bid you cease perforce, the cravings wild
Of mind to madness given.

Ho there ! what ho ! I say ; 830
Give up those seats, and hasten to the ship :
I reverence not what this State honoureth.

ANTISTROPHE I

Chor. Ah, I may ne'er again
Behold the stream where graze the goodly kine,
Nourished and fed by which¹
The blood of cattle waxes strong and full !
*As with a native's right,
*And one of old descent,
I keep, old man, my seat, my seat, I say.

¹ The words recall the vision of the "seven well-favoured kine and fat-fleshed," which "came out of the river," as Pharaoh dreamed (Gen. xli. 1, 2), and which were associated so closely with the fertility which it ordinarily produced through the whole extent of the valley of the Nile.

THE SUPPLIANTS

Her. Nay, in a ship, a ship thou shalt soon go, 840
With or without thy will,
By force, I say, by force :
Come, come, provoke not evils terrible,
Falling by these my hands.

STROPHE II

Ghor. Ah me ! ah me !
Would thou may'st perish with no hand to help,
Crossing the sea's wide plain,
In wanderings far and wide,
Where Sarpedonian sand-bank ¹ spreads its length,
Driven by the sweeping blasts !
Her. Sob thou, and howl, and call upon the 850
Gods :
Thou shalt not 'scape that barque from Ægypt come,
Though thou should'st pour a bitterer strain of grief.

ANTISTROPHE II

Ghor. Woe ! woe ! Ah woe ! ah woe,
For this foul wrong ! Thou utterest fearful things ;
*Thou art too bold and insolent of speech.
*May mighty Nile that reared thee turn away
Thy wanton pride and lust
That we behold it not !
Her. I bid you go to yon ship double-prowed,²
With all your speed. Let no one lag behind ;
But little shall my grasp your ringlets spare. 860
[Seizes on the leader of the Suppliants]

¹ Two dangerous low headlands seem to have been known by this name, one on the coast of Kilikia, the other on that of the Thrakian Chersonese.

² No traces of ships of this structure are found in Egyptian art ; but, if the reading be right, it implies the existence of boats of some kind, so built that they could be steered from either end.

THE SUPPLIANTS

STROPHE III

Chor. Ah me ! my father, ah !
The help of holiest statues turns to woe ;
 He leads me to the sea,
 With motion spider-like,
Or like a dream, a dark and dismal dream,
 Ah woe ! ah woe ! ah woe !
O mother Earth ! O Earth ! O mother mine !
 Avert that cry of fear,
O Zeus, thou king ! O son of mother Earth !
Her. Nay, I fear not the Gods they worship here ;
They did not rear nor lead me up to age. 80

ANTISTROPHE III

Chor. Near me he rages now,

 That biped snake,
And like a viper bites me by the foot. •
 Oh, woe is me ! woe ! woe !
O mother Earth ! O Earth ! O mother mine !
 Avert that cry of fear,
O Zeus, thou king ! O son of mother Earth !
Her. If some one yield not, and to yon ship go,
The hand that tears her tunic will not pity.

STROPHE IV

Chor. Ho ! rulers of the State ! 800
 Ye princes ! I am seized.
Her. It seems, since ye are slow to hear my words,
That I shall have to drag you by the hair.

ANTISTROPHE IV

Chor. We are undone, undone !
We suffer, prince, unlooked-for outrages.

THE SUPPLIANTS

Her. Full many princes, heirs of great Ægyptos, Ye soon shall see. Take courage ; ye shall have No cause to speak of anarchy as there.

Enter KING followed by his Bodyguard

King. Ho there ! What dost thou ? and with what intent
Dost thou so outrage this Pelasgic land ?
Dost think thou comest to a town of women ? 890
Too haughty thou, a stranger 'gainst Hellenes,
And, sinning much, hast nothing done aright.

Her. What sin against the right have I then done ?

King. First, thou know'st not how stranger-guest should act.

Her. How so ? When I, but finding what I lost . . .

King. Whom among us dost thou then patrons call ?

Her. Hermes the Searcher, chiefest patron mine.¹

King. Thou, Gods invoking, honourest not the Gods.

Her. The Gods of Neilos are the Gods I worship.

King. Ours then are nought, if I thy meaning catch. 900

Her. These girls I'll lead, if no one rescues them.

King. Lay hand on them, and soon thou'lt pay the cost.

Her. I hear a word in no wise hospitable.

King. Who rob the Gods ? I welcome not as guests.

¹ Hermes, the guardian deity of heralds, is here described by the epithet which marked him out as being also the patron of detectives. Every stranger arriving in a Greek port had to place himself under a proxenos or patron of some kind. The herald, having no proxenos among the citizens, appeals to his patron deity.

THE SUPPLIANTS

Her. I then will tell Ægyptos' children this.

King. This threat is all unheeded in my mind.

Her. But that I, knowing all, may speak it plain,
(For it is meet a herald should declare
Each matter clearly,) what am I to say?
By whom have I been robbed of that fair band
Of women whom I claim as kindred? Nay, 910
But it is Ares that shall try this cause,
And not with witnesses, nor money down,
Settling the matter, but there first must fall
Full many a soldier, and of many a life
The rending in convulsive agony. •

King. Why should I tell my name? In time thou'lt know it,

Thou and thy fellow-travellers. But these maidens,
With their consent and free choice of their wills,
Thou may'st lead off, if godly speech persuade them:
But this decree our city's men have made
With one consent, that we to force yield not
This company of women. Here the nail 920
Is driven tight home to keep its place full firm;¹
These things are written not on tablets only,
[Nor signed and sealed in folds of byblos-rolls;]
Thou hear'st them clearly from a tongue that speaks
With full, free speech. Away, away, I say:
And with all speed from out my presence haste.

Her. It is thy will then a rash war to wage:
May strength and victory on our males attend!

[Exit

¹ The words refer to the custom of nailing decrees, proclamations, treaties, and the like, engraved on metal or marble, upon the walls of temples or public buildings. Traces of the same idea may possibly be found in the promise to Eliakim that he shall be "as a nail in a sure place" (Isa. xlii. 23), in the thanksgiving of Ezra that God had given His people "a nail in his holy place" (Ezra ix. 8).

THE SUPPLIANTS

King. Nay, thou shalt find the dwellers of this land
Are also males, and drink not draughts of ale 930
From barley brewed.¹ [To the Suppliants.] But ye, and your attendants,
Take courage, go within the fenced city,
Shut in behind its bulwark deep of towers ;
Yea, many houses to the State belong,
And I a palace own not meanly built,
If ye prefer to live with many others
In ease and plenty : or if that suits better,
Ye may inhabit separate abodes.
Of these two offers that which pleases best
Choose for yourselves, and I as your protector, 940
And all our townsmen, will defend the pledge
Which our decree has given you. Why wait'st thou
For any better authorised than these ?

Chor. For these thy good deeds done may'st thou in good,
All good, abound, great chief of the Pelasgi !
But kindly send to us
Our father Danaos, brave and true of heart,
To counsel and direct.
His must the first decision be where we Should dwell, and where to find
A kindly home ; for ready is each one
To speak his word of blame 'gainst foreigners. 950
But may all good be ours !
And so with fair repute and speech of men,
Free from all taint of wrath,
So place yourselves, dear handmaids, in the land,

¹ As before, the bread of the Hellenes was praised to the disparagement of the "byblos fruit" of Egypt, so here their wine to that of the Egyptian beer, which was the ordinary drink of the lower classes.

THE SUPPLIANTS

As Danaos hath for each of us assigned
Dowry of handmaid slaves.

Enter DANAOS followed by Soldiers

Dan. My children, to the Argives ye should pray,
And sacrifice, and full libations pour,
As to Olympian Gods, for they have proved,
With one consent, deliverers: and they heard
*All that I did towards those cousins there, 960
*Those lovers hot and bitter. And they gave
To me as followers these that bear the spear,
That I might have my meed of honour due,
And might not die by an assassin's hand
A death unlooked-for, and thus leave the land
A weight of guilt perpetual: and 'tis fit
That one who meets such kindness should return,
*From his heart's depths, a nobler gratitude;
And add ye this to all already written,
Your father's many maxims of true wisdom,
That we, though strangers, may in time be known; 970
For as to aliens each man's tongue is apt
For evil, and spreads slander thoughtlessly;
But ye, I charge you, see ye shame me not,
With this your life's bloom drawing all men's eyes.
The goodly vintage is full hard to watch,
All men and beasts make fearful havoc of it,
Nay, birds that fly, and creeping things of earth;
And Kypris offers fruitage, dropping ripe,
*As prey to wandering lust, nor lets it stay;¹
And on the goodly comeliness of maidens 980
Each passer-by, o'ercome with hot desire,

¹ The words present a striking parallelism to the erotic imagery of the Song of Solomon: "Take us the foxes, the little foxes that spoil our vines, for our vines have tender grapes" (ii. 15).

THE SUPPLIANTS

Darts forth the amorous arrows of the eye.
 And therefore let us suffer nought of this,
 Through which our ship has ploughed such width of sea,
 Such width of trouble; neither let us work
 Shame to ourselves, and pleasure to our foes.
 This two-fold choice of home is open to you :
 [Pelasgos offers his, the city theirs,]
 To dwell rent-free. Full easy terms are these :
 Only, I charge you, keep your father's precepts,
 Prizing as more than life your chastity. 990

Chor. May the high Gods that on Olympos dwell
 Bless us in all things; but for this our vintage
 Be of good cheer, my father; for unless
 The counsels of the Gods work strange device,
 I will not leave my spirit's former path.

STROPHE I

Semi-Chor. A. Go then and make ye glad the high
 Gods, blessed for ever,
 Those who rule our towns, and those who watch over our city,
 And they who dwell by the stream of Erasinus ancient.¹

Semi-Chor. B. And ye, companions true,
 Take up your strain of song. 1000
 Let praise attend this city of Pelasgos;
 Let us no more, no more adore the mouths of Neilos
 With these our hymns of praise;

ANTISTROPHE I

Semi-Chor. A. Nay, but the rivers here that pour calm streams through our country,²

¹ The Erasinus was supposed to rise in Arcadia, in Mount Stymphalos, to disappear below the earth, and to come to sight again in Argolis.

² In this final choral ode of the Suppliants, as in that of the Seven against Thebes, we have the phenomenon of the division of

THE SUPPLIANTS

Parents of many a son, making glad the soil of our meadows,
With wide flood rolling on, in full and abounding richness.

Semi-Chor. B. And Artemis the chaste,
May she behold our band
With pity ; ne'er be marriage rites enforc'd
On us by Kythereia : those who hate us,
Let that ill prize be theirs.

STROPHE II

Semi-Chor. A. Not that our kindly strain does slight to Kypris immortal ;
For she, together with Hera, as nearest to Zeus is mighty,
A goddess of subtle thoughts, she is honoured in mysteries solemn.

Semi-Chor. B. Yea, as associates too with that their mother beloved,
Are fair Desire and Suasion,¹ whose pleading no man can gainsay,
Yea, to sweet Concord too Aphrodite's power is entrusted.

And the whispering paths of the Loves.

the Chorus, hitherto united, into two sections of divergent thought and purpose. Semi-Chorus A. remains steadfast in its purpose of perpetual virginity; Semi-Chorus B. relents, and is ready to accept wedlock.

¹ The two names were closely connected in the local worship of Athens, the temples of Aphrodite and Peitho (Suasion) standing at the south-west angle of the Acropolis. If any special purpose is to be traced in the invocation, we may see it in the poet's desire to bring out the nobler, more ethical side of Aphrodite's attributes, in contrast with the growing tendency to look on her as simply the patroness of brutal lust.

THE SUPPLIANTS

ANTISTROPHE II

Semi-Chor. A. Yet am I sore afraid of the ship that chases us wanderers,
Of terrible sorrows, and wars that are bloody and hateful ;

*Why else have they had fair gale for this their eager pursuing ?

Semi-Chor. B. Whate'er is decreed of us, I know that it needs must happen ;
The mighty purpose of Zeus, unfailing, admits no transgression :

*May this fate come to us, as to many women before us,

*Fate of marriage and spouse !

STROPHE III

Semi-Chor. A. Ah, may great Zeus avert
From me all marriage with Ægyptos' sons !

Semi-Chor. B. Nay, all will work for good.

Semi-Chor. A. Thou glozest that which will no glozing bear.

Semi-Chor. B. And thou know'st not what future comes to us.

ANTISTROPHE III

Semi-Chor. A. How can I read the mind
Of mightiest Zeus, to sight all fathomless ?

Semi-Chor. B. Well-tempered be thy speech !

Semi-Chor. A. What mood of calmness wilt thou school me in ?

Semi-Chor. B. Be not o'er-rash in what concerns the Gods.

THE SUPPLIANTS

STROPHE IV

Semi-Chor. A. Nay, may our great king Zeus avert that marriage
With husbands whom we hate,
E'en He who, touching her with healing hand,
Freed Io from her pain,
Putting an end from all her wanderings,
Working with kindly force ! 1050

ANTISTROPHE IV

Semi-Chor. B. And may He give the victory to women !
I choose the better part,
Though mixed with ill ; and that the trial end
Justly, as I have prayed,
By means of subtle counsels which God gives
To liberate from ills.¹

¹ The play, as acted, formed part of a trilogy, and the next play, the Danaïds, probably contained the sequel of the story, the acceptance by the Suppliants of the sons of Ægyptos in marriage, the plot of Danaos for the destruction of the bridegrooms on the wedding-night, and the execution of the deed of blood by all but Hypermnestra.
